Byrd Attacks Priming.

By the United Press.

Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, leader of the conservative Democratic bloc at the Capitol, last night denounced Government priming of the business pump as President Roosevelt prepared to initiate a vast new spending program at a conference today with his Congressional lieutenants.

Warning that the Administration's plans to pour another $4,000,000,000 into recovery and relief projects will shoot the deficit in the coming fiscal year to $5,000,000,000, Byrd demanded the New Deal economize.

Frugality Demanded.

"The time has come to realize that mounting deficits and continuing for nine years to recklessly spend more than we have contribute to lack of confidence that stagnates the business world of America today," he said. "Appropriations for relief already exist and with economical and frugal management will go far to prevent actual distress."

"The new spending program is superimposed upon the old. We have not reduced our emergency spending and this new proposal will simply add billions more to what we have already been spending.

"We have the most costly and wasteful bureaucracy in the history of any civilized nation. We continue to recklessly spend borrowed money with no effort to eliminate the waste and extravagance that now exist. What we need today is a restoration of confidence that the Government of the people shall be operated along sound and sensible lines.

Snell Joins Demand.

"I shall always vote to prevent any American from suffering the lack of the necessities of life. Continued increases in the public debt for pump priming reduce our ability to provide for those in distress. The best security we can give the masses of the people of America is the security of a sound and solvent Government, able at all times to meet for the best interests of the people any emergency that may occur."

House Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, also demanded that "runaway Federal spend-

Two Marines Try Vainly to Save Him; Mother Hysterical.

Toppling into swirling waters of Rock Creek when he attempted to retrieve a fishing line, 10-year-old Richard Wenit, 1601 Argonne place northwest, was drowned yesterday while two Marines struggled to reach him.

The tragedy occurred just below the falls at Pierce Mill in view of hundreds of Sunday visitors in the park.

Jimmy Jones, 9, of the Argonne place address, companion of the drowned boy, managed to grasp his pal's foot as the boy fell but could not keep his hold against the strong undercurrent.

Waltman Joins Republicans as Publicity Chief

Post Writer Will Assume Duties as Party Moves Into Campaign.

Appointment of Franklyn Waltman, jr., chief of The Washington Post's national news staff and author of the triweekly column, "Politics and People," as director of publicity for the Republican National Committee, was announced yesterday by John Hamilton, committee chairman.

Hamilton said that under Waltman's direction, "the publicity division of the Republican National Committee will be reorganized and revitalized in order that the minority party may more effectively fulfill its function as an intelligent, alert opposition—an opposition which is essential to the preservation of our system of government."

Waltman, who will take over his new duties within a few days, will assume charge of Republican publicity at a time when the party is moving into the first stages of the 1938 Congressional and 1940 Presidential contests. Hamilton, in his statement concerning the appointment, continued:

"Waltman will bring to the Republican national headquarters the fine talent and capacity for work with which he has served during the last 15 years two of the country's great newspapers, the Baltimore Sun and The Washington Post.

Girdler Denies Blame.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, April 10.—T. M. Girdler, chairman of Republic Steel Corporation, said tonight the National Labor Relations Board was "wrong" when it accused Republic of violating the Wagner act before and during last summer's "little steel" strike and indicated the company would fight the board's decision through the courts.

The board decided yesterday that Republic had violated the Wagner act on eight counts and ordered the corporation to reinstate 5,000 strikers with back pay from April 8; to break up employe representation plans at five Ohio plants, and to stop practices which would lead employes to think they were not free to join the C. I. O. or other unions.

The board also placed responsibility for the death of three strikers in a riot last July near the corporation's Massillon plant on Republic.

Girdler referred to a section of the Labor Board's decision in which, he said, the board did not find the company's refusal to sign with C. I. O. "to be an unfair labor practice." This, Girdler said, was "complete justification of the stand taken by the company."

"Last summer," Girdler's statement said, "Republic refused to sign the C. I. O. contract because, among other reasons, we knew that the majority of our men were opposed to such signature and because sit-down strikes in other in-

Short Cold Spell, Rise to Mid 50s Predicted Today

Near freezing was forecast by the Weather Bureau for early this morning after the mercury climbed to a high of 52 yesterday to provide fair weather for Palm Sunday.

Today's cold spell, however, is expected to be short, with the mercury climbing to the middle fifties in the afternoon and clear skies with variable winds prevailing most of the day.

Meanwhile, the double cherry blossoms in East Potomac Park, still undamaged by continued threats of cold weather during the past week, were expected by park officials to appear about Wednesday.

C.I.O. Fights For 3,200 in D. C. Transit

Lewis Group Confident They'll Win Election in 30 Days.

Handbill Says Union Wants 15 Per Cent Pay Rise.

The A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. are about to stage their biggest clash in Washington, one involving 3,200 bus drivers, motormen, conductors and shopmen of the Capital Transit Co.

For 21 years these workers have been represented by the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway and Coach Employes, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Last night the Transport Union Workers (C. I. O.) inaugurated a high-powered campaign to win over the workers and become their agent in collective bargaining. Negotiations between the company and the A. F. of L. unit are now in progress for a new contract.

Two Mass Meetings.

The C. I. O. Union, which has organized 80,000 transport workers in New York City, has called two mass meetings for tomorrow night. They will be held in Turner's Arena, 1341 W street northwest, one at 8:30 p. m. and the other at 1 a. m. Michael J. Quill, president of the Transport Workers Union, and other C. I. O. leaders will tell the local transport men why they should go over to the John L. Lewis outfit.

The National Labor Relations Board, according to a C. I. O. announcement, has set Wednesday "as a deadline for proof that the Capital Transit men want a chance to vote for the Transport Workers Union."

Program Outlined.

After charging that the A. F. of L. Union is "company unionism in disguise," the C. I. O. in a handbill outlined its program locally as follows:

1. No further changes of two-man cars into one-man cars.
2. A flat 15 per cent increase in pay.
3. Two weeks vacation with pay.
4. Thirty-five dollars weekly guarantee pay for extra men, and four days off each month.
5. No speed-up, better schedules, more layover time, no dizzy swings.
6. Full pay for show-up time.
7. Pensions, with union repre-

Two Lost as Ship, Cut in Halves by Blast, Founders

New York, April 10 (AP).—Two lives were lost, including that of a heroic wireless operator, and 29 men were rescued from the Greek steamship Mount Kyllene as she was torn apart by an explosion 200 miles off the Azores, it was reported by the Radiomarine Corporation today.

The radio operator, Papa Theodorou, was drowned as he leaped for a lifeboat. Although his radio apparatus was damaged by the explosion, Theodorou rigged up an emergency set and sent out SOS calls that took three ships to the rescue.

Kennedy Explains Bows Make Ill Will

London, April 10 (U.P.).—United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy said tonight he restricted court presentations of American women to wives of United States officials and citizens living in the United Kingdom because the old system created ill-will.

"All my predecessors had this problem and I am just tackling it," he said. "It not only causes trouble, but there is no fair basis for judgment. While you pick 30 to be presented, you may leave 300 or 400 in the States, many saying 'Who wants to go to England anyway to bow to the king?'

"It doesn't make for good will between the two countries."

Nazis Indict Otto For High Treason

Vienna (Monday), April 11 (U.P.).—Archduke Otto of Hapsburg, pretender to the Austrian throne, has been indicted for high treason and a warrant issued for his extradition, it was understood today. Under German law high treason is punishable by death. Otto consequently would be liable to arrest and trial for his life if he appeared in German territory.

Franco Turns Toward Valencia In Opening Drive on Fifth Front

New Offensive Adds Thousands to Refugees Streaming to French Sanctuary; Sagunto, on Coast, Is Objective.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, April 10.—The insurgent offensive to end the Spanish civil war today became a five-pronged fork which Generalissimo Francisco Franco jabbed into northeastern Spain, from the French frontier region to the middle eastern coast.

Insurgent strategists added the fifth prong when Gen. Jose Varela, commanding an army of veterans drawn from the Catalonian line, began a surprise drive against government defenses on the Teruel-Valencia highway.

Varela's objective was Sagunto, on the coast 15 miles north of Valencia and 175 miles southwest of Barcelona.

The broadened drive prodded new thousand of fearful civilians and disheartened government militiamen into flight toward the French frontier.

Villages were deserted in the exodus. It was estimated that 7,000 noncombatant men, women and children were trudging toward sanctuary in France. Thousands had preceded them in the last two weeks.

The insurgent drive on the Teruel-Valencia road against Sagunto was intended to supplement operations to the northeast and give the insurgents control of a 130-mile strip of seaboard from Sagunto to Tarragona.

Insurgent officers said the coastal conquest would permit Franco to establish a naval base between the two segments of government Spain, Catalonia and the Madrid-Valencia territory.

Aside from the Sagunto offensive, the other prongs of the insurgent offensive were:

1. The front before Vinaroz where Gen. Miguel Aranda sent his mixed force of Italians, Navarrese and

American Tells Of Humiliating Japanese Loss

Taierhchwang, Shantung Province, via Suchow, April 10—The imperial Japanese army has suffered one of the most humiliating defeats in its history in a series of battles still continuing in south Shantung Province.

This correspondent, accompanied by Capt. Evans Carlson, U. S. M. C., of Plymouth, Conn., and Jack Young, Tibetan explorer, today returned from a 48-hour tour of the areas reconquered by the Chinese and can testify from personal observation as to the extent of the disaster to Nipponese arms.

Chinese Sweep On.

We saw scores of Japanese corpses still unburied around Shahochuang, a village 2 miles north of Taierhchwang.

Gen. Li Tsung-jen, commanding the Chinese forces, said several hundred Japanese were wiped out when they made a last stand at Shahochuang rather than join other regiments in retreat.

Their bodies were buried in common graves with Szechuan provincial infantrymen killed in attacking them.

99.75% For Hitler.

By the United Press.

Vienna, April 10.—Millions of Austrians today cast an overwhelming vote for Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's annexation of their homeland.

Complete official returns showed that 99.75 per cent of Austria's voters rallied to the catch-words of "One Reich! One People! One Fuehrer!" and voted "yes."

Germany's populace appeared, however, on the basis of nearly complete returns from the plebiscite staged simultaneously among nearly 50,000,000 German-speaking people in Austria and Germany, to have shown less enthusiasm over the annexation of Austria than their blood brothers beyond the Bavarian Alps.

Of the total vote in both Germany and Austria the percentage of "yes" votes was listed at only 99.082 per cent.

Some observers believed that the managers of the plebiscite had hoped that the Austrian yes vote would run higher, as it did, for psychological effect.

It was indicated that 49,546,950 persons voted today, 4,294,795 of them in Austria, where all persons over 20 years of age with the exception of Jews and prisoners were permitted to voice their acclaim of Hitler at the polls. Of the total voting 48,799,269 marked their ballots "yes."

Of the 4,284,795 eligible Austrian voters 4,273,884 voted "Yes," on the ballots marked:

"Do you approve of the reunion of Austria with the German Reich March 15 and do you vote for the list (of a new "Greater German"

Rightists Rule France.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 10.—Edouard Daladier, France's "peacetime warlord," formed a "national defense" cabinet today and went to work immediately to give the nation the order and security he promised.

Even as he presented his government to President Albert Lebrun, tens of thousands of workers rallied under the red flag and marched down the boulevards of Paris singing the Internationale.

The ministry, succeeding the one headed by Socialist Leon Blum which resigned Friday, is a streamlined government of 19 men, of whom 12 are Radical-Socialists, including the premier, and the remainder members of smaller center groups.

Socialists Refuse Part.

Socialists refused to take part.

Rightists hailed the new government as "the end of the People's Front," the coalition of Socialists and Radical-Socialists, supported by the Communists, in power since Blum's first cabinet was formed June 4, 1936.

The cabinet at least constituted a swing to the right from the governments of the last two years.

Daladier, a Radical-Socialist, took the premiership and remained as minister of national defense and war.

Georges Bonnet, former ambassador to Washington, became minister of foreign affairs. Former Premier Camille Chautemps was named vice premier and minister in charge of interministerial coordination.

Police on Guard.

Daladier and five ministers, including Chautemps and Bonnet, will form a kind of inner council to meet daily.

This group is expected to conduct most of the important affairs of government.

The workers' demonstration was to show that the People's Front still is a power with which to reckon.

A thousand police and mobile guardsmen patrolled the area in the heart of Paris where the outgoing government authorized the march despite Daladier's opposition.

But the marchers were orderly. The parade was made up mostly of Communists and Left Wing Socialists, the rest of the People's Front adherents failing to appear.

A huge Spanish government flag flew along with French flags from the reviewing stand past which the marchers wound their way.

The paraders shouted demands for dissolution of the senate, which toppled Blum's ministry, and for

2 Capital Chemists Awarded High Honors for Their Work

Dr. Cottrell Wins Medal as Dr. Pigman Gets Fellowship.

Awards for work in chemistry went to two Washington men from two sources yesterday.

Dr. Frederick K. Cottrell, Washington chemist and inventor, was given the annual award of the American Institute of Chemists. A medal was awarded Dr. Cottrell for his "outstanding scientific achievements and for his service to the profession through the support of research," according to Maxmillian Tech, of New York City, president of the institute.

Dr. Walter W. Pigman, of the University of Maryland, associated with the National Bureau of Standards here, was awarded a fellowship by the board of trustees of the Lalor Foundation of Wilmington, Del. He will work with Prof. Helferich, of Leipzig, Germany, on the chemical nature and constitution of enzymes.

Mexicans to Call Power Walkout Against U. S. Firm

Mexico City, April 10 (AP).—Threat of a power strike was added today to worries stemming from the government's expropriation of the $400,000,000 foreign oil industry.

Despite President Lazaro Cardenas' appeals to labor to avoid conflicts in the present crisis, employes of Electric Bond & Share Co. subsidiaries in six important towns had planned to walk out at midnight. At 11:50 p. m. they postponed the strike 20 days.

The difficulties arose over the workers' charge that the companies refused to sign new labor contracts. Vicente Lombardo Toledano, head of the Confederation of Mexican Workers, said the utilities were trying to aid the oil interests.

House to Insist On Profits Tax In Conference

Revenue Bill 'Showdown' to Come This Week in 'Third House.'

By the Associated Press.

A "show-down" contest over the undistributed profits tax and other administration-approved levies rejected by the Senate will begin this week in a conference committee, sometimes called the "Third House" of Congress.

When the Senate and House differ widely on proposed legislation, as is the case with the $5,000,000,000 tax revision bill, each names a committee to compose the differences.

The Conferees then engage in a series of "horse trades" to reach agreement. After that, they report to the two Congressional branches. Either House then rejects the agreement and instruct its conferees to seek a new compromise or "discharge" them and names a new committee.

House to Insist.

The Senate approved Friday a tax measure shorn of the undistributed profits tax, a levy desired by the Administration but vigorously denounced by business spokesmen.

Administration leaders, who did not put up a strong fight for this tax in the Senate, acknowledged that their strategy was to attempt to restore it in conference. The tax was approved by the House, but was removed from the bill by the Senate Finance Committee.

An influential member of the House who has followed the tax controversy closely expressed the opinion yesterday that there was a "good chance" the profits levy would be included in the measure finally enacted. He said the House conferees certainly would insist upon it.

Borah Plan a Defeat.

The Senate accepted with few changes the tax bill prepared by its committee which tried, Chairman Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, said, to restore business confidence and encourage industry.

The principal defeat suffered by the committee was the Senate vote, 34 to 33, to insert a proposal by Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, to make interest on future issues of Government securities subject to Federal income taxes.

Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky joined Harrison in opposing this provision.

Chicago Primary Campaign Closing As Guards Abound

Chicago, April 10 (AP).—Preparations to guard against violence in Chicago Tuesday were under way tonight as the Democratic primary campaign entered its final stages. Both Democratic and Republican voters will nominate candidates for the United States Senate, for Congress and for State offices.

State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney, of Cook County (Chicago), an ally of Gov. Henry Horner, who is backing Representative Scott Lucas, of Havana, for the Democratic Senatorial nomination, said he would detail 150 special police to the polls.

As Gov. Horner said "hoodlums" were trying to intimidate his workers in Chicago, the Board of Election Commissioners organized 75 additional squads of three guards each.

Dr. Lewis Is Given Aeronautics Post

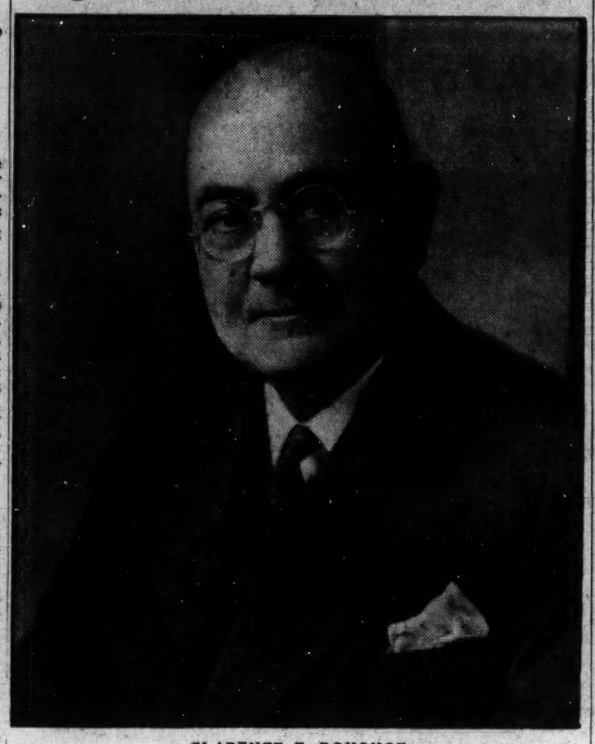
Dr. George W. C. F. Donohoe, Real Estate Man, Eager to Raze Southeast Slums



CLARENCE F. DONOHOE.

Civic Leader Points Out That Would Help Business Conditions, But He Would Favor It Even If It Did Not.

By Christine Sadler

Slums are a costly load for any community to carry, in the opinion of Clarence F. Donohoe, real estate dealer and president of the Southeast Business Men's Association, who hopes to see the slum spots of his organization's territory cleared up for good.

"I am convinced that cleaning out slums areas is a good business proposition. The property values of the neighborhood are thereby increased; but I would want them cleared out even if the value of the clearance could not be measured in business terms," he declares.

There are several places the Southeast association would like to have cleaned up in its territory, but Navy Place — betwen Sixth and Seventh and G and I—is the next objective.

Long Fight for Bridge.

Donohoe places that project alongside an incinerator for the garbage plant at New Jersey and K as the most important matters now facing his group—since the new Pensylvania Avenue bridge is assured.

"We waged a long fight for the bridge and probably would class it as our greatest accomplishment, although, of course we cannot claim all the credit.

"It is going to mean a great deal in the development of the southeastern party of the city across the river, but it will also mean much to us on this side," he declares.

Incinerator Better.

The garbage plant has had a devastating effect on the section in which it was placed and the sooner the incinerator can be placed there the better, in his opinion.

The Southeast Business Men's Association has around 200 members, is actively interested in all civic and business enterprises of its area, and meets the second Monday of every month. The meetings are held in the office of the president, who is associated with two of his brothers in the real estate company of John F. Donohoe & Sons. The business was established in 1884. Clarence Donohoe has been with the company for 44 years and will celebrate his sixtieth birthday tomorrow.

Founded In 1919.

The association was founded in 1919, with Donohoe as one of the charter members. He was treasurer for a while before becoming president three terms ago.

The group is in favor of District suffrage, a sales tax, more policemen, and more traffic lights. Delegates from the association call on the Commissioners each year to talk over the needs of their community.

"We have always been treated with the utmost courtesy and get as much co-operation as the Commmissioners are able to give. They have gone through our territory with us to see conditions for themselves. We have received many street improvements as a result. Just now we are working for street improvements across the bridge." Donohoe says.

Wants Airport in Maryland.

The association has long been on record as favoring location of the Washington airport in Maryland. Camp Springs is one of the sites it has urged. With the new bridge, the Maryland area will become more accessible, Donohoe points out, declaring that "we still favor a Maryland location."

Donohoe is a native of the District and a member of the Knights of Columbus. He has one daughter and five sons. One son is now connected with the real estate company—bringing the number of Donohoes in the organization to four. The Clarence F. Donohoes live at 1743 Webster street northwest.

On Wednesday—Julian O. Cardin, president of the Northeast Business Men's Association, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Little TVA Probe Urged on Congress By Nebraska Unit

Grand Island, Nebr., April 10 (AP). A group of Platte River water users asked Congress today to extend its investigation of the Tennessee Valley Authority to include Nebraska's "Little TVA, one of the seven regional and auxiliary units."

Te Platte River Water Protective Association, in a letter to all Senators and Representatives, asserted, "Not only can the Federal Government yet save about $30,000,000 by stopping this work now, but it will thereby lessen the possibility of a huge claim for damages to riparian land owners in the 270 miles of lower valley."

The Public Works Administration has loaned and granted approximately $55,000,000 to develop five major hydroelectric power and irrigation projects in Nebraska.

Wallace to Speak At Traffic Award

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace will speak at the award dinner of the annual national traffic safety contest at the Mayflower Hotel at 7 p. m. tomorrow.

Victory plaques will be presented by D. D. Fennell, president of the National Safety Council, to governors and mayors of States and cities which achieved outstanding traffic safety records in 1937.

Memphis, first prize winner among the cities, will be represented by municipal officials and 16-year-old Tom Applewhite, president of the city's junior safety patrol.

Alfred Sloan, president of General Motors, and Paul Hoffman, president of the Studebaker Corporation, are among the automobile executives expected.

Auto Union President Beaten by Invaders

Detroit, April 10 (U.P.).—Police tonight sought two men who invaded a United Automobile Workers Union meeting in a private home and attacked Walter Reuther, president of the U. A. W.'s powerful West Side local. Reuther was beaten on the head with a blackjack. His injuries were not serious.

Legislator Finds 'Hornets' Nest' of Publicity Offices

Stating he had given up hope the House Rules Committee would act on his resolution to investigate "the costly propaganda system" of the New Deal, Representative J. Parnell Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, disclosed yesterday he had begun a one-man inquiry concerning Government press agents.

Thomas said he had asked "every Government department and alphabetical agency" for information on "gathering, writing, editing and distributing of material for newspapers, magazines and other non-Government periodicals." He also asked for titles and samples of press and magazine releases and estimates of annual costs.

The Department of Labor answered his inquiries fully, said Thomas, sending nine mail sacks filled with samples. The Treasury Department asked delay because of "pressure of Treasury duties" and others have not yet replied. Thomas, who asserts such Government activity violates a law passed 25 years ago, concluded, "Apparently I have stepped on a hornets' nest in poking around the New Deal propaganda bureaus."

D.A.R. Announces Defense Meeting

Mrs. William A. Becker, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, announced yesterday that the organization will sponsor a national defense meeting at the Hotel Mayflower on April 18, just prior to the opening of the D. A. R. Forty-seventh Continental Congress.

Approximately 2,000 D. A. R. members will attend. Dr. Ruth Alexander, economist and lecturer, will talk on "Capitalism and Democracy."

Others on the program will be Dr. Arthur Deerin Call, secretary of the American Peace Society; Robert L. Johnson, president of the National Civil Service Reform League, and Victoria Booth Demarest, granddaughter of the founders of the Salvation Army. Mrs. Vinton Earl Sisson, of Illinois, will preside.

Power Capacity In U. S. Raised By 164,769 H.P.

Increase Since Beginning of Last Year Brings Total to 17,284,379.

By the Associated Press.

The total installed capacity of hydroelectric plants of 100 or more horsepower in the United States is 17,284,379 horsepower—an increase of 164,769 since the beginning of last year—the Federal Power Commission said yesterday.

Seventeen years of fitting the country's streams into the economic life of a nation dependent to a large extent upon electricity has brought an increase of nearly 10,000,000 horsepower in installed capacity, the commission reported.

The West has contributed heavily to the total production of waterpower. The Pacific region on January 1 had 286 plants capable of generating 4,064,715 horsepower. Water turbines in 276 South Atlantic plants are capable of producing 3,223,902 horsepower.

Four hundred and eighty nine plants in the Middle Atlantic States had an installed capacity of 2,436,549 horsepower. New England's 881 plants are prepared to develop 2,003,722 horsepower.

There are 235 plants with an installed capacity of 1,758,236 horsepower in the mountain States; 48 in the East South Central States with an installed capacity of 1,562,719; 405 in the East North Central States with 1,244,411; 188 in the West North Central States with 840,384, and 32 in the West South Central region with 149,741.

24 Will Defend Labor Attorney

A committee of nationally known lawyers, headed by Robert H. Jackson, solicitor general, has been formed to defend Edward Lamb, Toledo, Ohio, labor attorney, facing disbarment proceedings growing out of a strike case, the National Lawyers Guild announced last night. Lamb faced disbarment after he defended the United Shoe Workers of America, a C. I. O. affiliate, in an injunction case arising out of a strike against the Williams Manufacturing Co., of Portsmouth, Ohio. The National Labor Relations Board upheld the union.

Also included on the defense committee of 24 are Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, Jerome Frank, of the SEC; Dean Lloyd K. Garrison of the University of Wisconsin Law School, Lee Pressman, C. I. O. general counsel; Joseph Padway, A. F. of L. general counsel; Gov. Elmer Benson of Minnesota, Federal District Judge William H. Holly, of Chicago, and Morris L. Ernst.

The guild charged the proceedings against Lamb "menace the right of members of the bar to represent unpopular causes . . ."

Senator Caraway Renews Husband's Attack on Lobbies

Senator Hattie Caraway, of Arkansas, whose husband, the late Senator Thaddeus Caraway, conducted a lobby inquiry some years ago disclosing what he termed "a most pernicious and harmful deterrent to free and deliberative legislation," continued yesterday the attack on "government by lobbies."

"We hear constantly of the dangers of fascism and communism to the country," said Mrs. Caraway. "Alarmists bewail a threatened dictatorship for America. Sift it all down and at the bottom will be found some pressure group either lobbying in Washington or spreading propaganda throughout the country with the real purpose of putting over something for some special interest.

"We might as well face the issue squarely," concluded Mrs. Caraway, "and decided whether we are going to yield to government by lobbies or proceed by orderly statutory processes."

Kennel Club Show Will Award $1,000

The ninth annual National Capital Kennel Club dog show, to be held at the Packard Building April 30, is expected to be the largest in the history of Washington, it was announced yesterday.

More than 1,000 entries, representing every breed registered with the American Kennel Club, are anticipated. Specialty shows will be held for three breeds: Scottish deerhounds, in charge of John Herrick, assistant to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs; Shetland sheepdogs, under direction of Mrs. Ruth R. Taynton, of Falls Church, and Boston terriers, whose show will be arranged by Richard C. Barney, president of the Boston Terrier Club of Maryland.

Frank Downing, president of the club, yesterday said more awards will be given than ever before, including $1,000 in cash and a large number of silver trophies and other prizes. Secretary of the club is Mrs. Jere B. Mackle.

Henry Fords' Golden Wedding Will Be Marked Quietly Today

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

MR. AND MRS. HENRY FORD, pictured at their Dearborn home a few days before the observance of their golden wedding anniversary today. This also is Mrs. Ford's seventy-first birthday.

Informal 2-Day Celebration to Commemorate Forming of Partnership in Village Parlor, 50 Years Ago; He Expected to Be a Farmer.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, April 10.—Henry Ford and Clara Bryant Ford tomorrow will reach the fiftieth anniversary of the partnership which began in the parlor of a Greenfield village farmhouse on a day when there were no motorcars and Ford's parents expected him to become a farmer.

Because Ford generally discourages celebrations and observances, the golden wedding anniversary celebration is to be personal and informal. Actually it will spread over two days.

Tomorrow, which will also be Mrs. Ford's seventy-first birthday, Mr. and Mrs. Edsel Ford are to be hosts to members of the family and intimate friends. This celebration will be at the home of Edsel Ford, the couple's only son. Tuesday evening service clubs of suburban Dearborn will join in a celebration in Ford's reproduction of Independence Hall, not far from where the marriage took place April 11, 1888.

"Get-Together" Tomorow.

This observance will be marked by the presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Ford of a bound volume of letters from friends and admirers throughout the country.

As if to emphasize Ford's aversion for ostentation, invitations to Tuesday night's ceremonies read "informal, please," and sponsors of the event plan to make it just a big get-together of his friends and neighbors.

Within sight of the scene of Tuesday's celebration are the original 40 acres Ford's father presented to him as a wedding gift. Much of the acreage was timbered land from which Ford cut lumber and built a neat story-and-a-half home.

He Looks Younger.

It was from this home that Ford moved to Detroit a few years later to accept a position as night fireman and engineer for the Detroit Electric Co., now the Detroit Edison Co., and to begin the experimental work that produced his first automobile.

Ford's salary at that time was $35 a month. Nobody now attempts to guess at the Ford fortune beyond saying it amounts to hundreds of millions.

The fiftieth anniversary of their wedding finds Mr. and Mrs. Ford unusually active and in seemingly excellent health. Mrs. Ford continues her interest in the farm and garden movement and devotes much time to sociological work, while her husband, who at 74 looks 10 years younger, continues to direct affairs of his industrial empire.

Waltman Joins Republicans as Publicity Chief

Waltman

Just 35 years old, he becomes another of the many aggressive young men who in recent years have entered the councils of the Republican Party because of their deep conviction that the New Deal is destroying the American system of free enterprise and closing the door of opportunity for the youth of this Nation.

"Those familiar with Waltman's newspaper work, particularly during the last year, need not be informed of his ability. They know him to be a clear-minded, painstaking and vigorous writer, well versed in politics and national affairs, respected not only by the newspaper profession but by all having contact with him, irrespective of party. His factual analysis of the Supreme Court "packing" bill was an outstanding journalistic achievement of last year and that work, by arousing public opinion, contributed materially to the defeat of that dangerous Roosevelt proposal."

Franklyn Waltman was born in Baltimore, June 3, 1903. He attended the public schools, graduated from Loyola High School and studied law at the University of Maryland. He commenced newspaper work with the Baltimore Sun in 1922, subsequently becoming the newspaper's State political reporter. Waltman was assigned to the Washington Bureau of the Baltimore Sun in 1928.

Won Prize in 1930.

In 1930 the Sun assigned Waltman to accompany to Haiti the Forbes commission to prepare a program for ending American occupation there. For his newspaper work on that trip Waltman received the $1,000 Pugsley journalistic award, administered by the National Press Club, for "the most noteworthy work by a Washington correspondent during the calendar year 1930."

In 1933 Waltman joined the national news staff of The Washington Post, and on January 1, 19 became chief of The Post's natio news staff and commenced his co umn "Politics and People."

In May, 1936, Waltman broa cast over a Nation-wide networ of the National Broadcasting C a series of personality sketches the leading contenders for th Presidential nomination.

During the last year in The Was ington Post he became one of th foremost journalistic critics of Pre ident Roosevelt's proposal for re organizing the Supreme Court an Federal judiciary.

Fought Court Plan.

He reviewed all changes ever made in the size of the Supreme Court and demonstrated the President's proposal was without precedent in American history. Subsequently he was one of the first to protest President Roosevelt's appointment to the Supreme Court of Hugo L. Black because of his Ku Klux Klan affiliations.

Waltman belongs to the Gridiron Club, the National Press Club, the Congressional Country Club and is now serving as secretary of the Overseas Writers, an organization of Washington newspapermen who have had foreign experience. He is married to the former Miss Ellen Moore Amos, of Baltimore.

aul Nelson, one of three men o allegedly escaped a police trap 3811 Suitland road southeast, ere Carlton G. (Cotty) Williams s shot to death, was arrested by nce Georges County police yes- ay on charges of carrying a ealed weapon and held for in- igation.

elson was seized by Officers rles McGuire and Edwin Cissel beer tavern in Hillside, Md. A aliber special police revolver, aining an exploded cartridge, found in one of his hip pockets, ce said.

search for Nelson began early erday when county police at er Marlboro were notified over telephone of a shooting at the establishment. McGuire said were unable to obtain the ne of their informant, but that described himself as a Capitol ding policeman.

elson was questioned by Wash- ton police last December after otty" Williams had been slain in alleged attempt to rob a safe at Suitland road address. The safe, taining $1,305, belonged to rles E. Nelson, brother of Paul son and operator of a string of machines in Prince Georges unty.

At a coroner's hearing into Wil- ms' death, Paul Nelson testified at he had been instructed by Wil- ms to point out where the safe s hidden.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

National Choral Union, under the rection of Hugh Ross, presents ozart's "Requiem" Sunday eve- ng in the Church of the Epiphany. rganist: William Brackett; soloists: hreen Carrico, Grace Berry, orge Anderson and Edwin Steffe.

Filling the Church of the Epiph- y, a reverent audience listened t evening to a performance of ozart's "Requiem" by the Na- nal Choral Union under the di- ction of Hugh Ross. In the ranks the well-trained singers were oristers from Reformation, All uls', Trinity, Ascension, St. Al- n's, St. Margaret's and Epiphany iscopal Churches.

A peculiar sentiment attaches to s work upon which Mozart erishly labored with the premo- ion of his own death driving him.

There are passages in which e hears a poignancy of personal otion found nowhere else in Mo- rt's music; the fear of death eaks through the "Dies Irae" with most unbearable accents of agony. he contrast between the depth of erturbation in the "Riquiem" and e noble serenity of "Die Zauber- bete," which immediately preced- it in composition, is as striking are the stylistic resemblances.

It is in the "Lacrimosa" that one els most strongly the immanence f the composer's mind, for it is in is section that he penned the last tes he ever wrote. On the after- on of the day before his death, iends gathered at his bedside to ng the first part of the movement o that he might hear how it ounded before proceeding to com- lete it. With a feeble voice he ok the alto part himself, and it is elated that tears dimmed his eyes s he took the pen to continue his ork on the manuscript.

Argument has not yet ended as o just how much of the "Requiem" Mozart actually wrote, and how uch Francis Xavier Suessmayr, is faithful pupil, contributed. The irst two numbers were finished by Mozart and exist in his handwriting. There are also sketches in his writ- ng of all but four of the remaining umbers, and in these sketches all he effects which seem to us re- markable are clearly indicated. However much of the score is Suessmayr's handiwork does not really matter, for the essence which make it great and beautiful music s Mozart's.

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Nelson Eddy, barytone, with Theo- dore Paxson as accompanist and as- isting artist, Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall.

As many of Nelson Eddy's ad- hirers as the safety regulations would allow inside Constitution Hall gave the young American bary- one a tumultuous reception yes- fternoon, and excitedly rewarded is every song with the adulation of their applause. The occasion was not one of cool appraisal but of enthusiastic enjoyment. Just be- cause it would not have mattered to his auditors what he sang, one is the more grateful to the popular singer for having taken the trouble to prepare two unfamiliar arias.

He began his recital with "Good Fellows, Be Merry," from Bach's secular cantata; "Mer hahn en neue Oberkeet," commonly called the "Peasant Cantata" because the text is in the rural dialect of Saxony, and closed his second group with the melodious "An jenem Tag," from the first act of Marschner's "Hans Heiling." Both these selec- tions were highly acceptable as va- riants from the usual program pro- cedure and as examples of sturdy and resonant vocalism. His final group as well showed independence in the choice of Coningsby Clarke's "The Blind Ploughman," John Al- den Carpenter's "Her Voice" and Michael Head's "My Sword for the King."

In the beaten path were Schu- bert's "Staendchen," Wolf's "Er Ist's," Legrenzi's "Che fiero cos- tume," Tosti's "Recordati di me" and the aria, Promesse de mon avenir," from Massenet's "Le Roi de Lahore." His extra numbers included one of Wenzel's stuttering songs from "The Bartered Bride," Erich Wolff's "Du bist so jung," MacDowell's "Thy Beaming Eyes," Augusta Holmes' "Au Pays," Mu- sorgski's "Evening Prayer," from the "Nursery" cycle, Holland's "Chum- leigh Fair" and "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes."

Mr. Eddy's voice in the lower and middle range is full, rich and sonor- ous, but the higher tones, which are not as well controlled, are fre- quently drained of color and show the effect of strain. His feeling for style is increasing, although there still is a certain monotony of treatment. His articulation is wholly admirable.

Deaf Mute Pair Admit Plot to Kill Her Mate

Husband Near Death, His Wife and Another Man Held.

Chicago, April 10 (U.P.).—Two deaf-mute lovers scrawled a story of frustrated affections on a police pad today and told how they plotted to kill Louis Wald, deaf-mute husband, because he stood in their way.

Wald lay near death in a hospital tonight, his skull crushed by hammer blows.

His wife, Sarah, 24, and Jack Glutzer were in police cells.

The three attended a party late yesterday. Most of the guests were deaf mutes. Mrs. Wald said it was by prearrangement with Glutzer that she persuaded her husband to go for a walk and stepped with him into an alley at the rear of their host's home. There Glutzer brought his hammer down on Wald's head.

Burns Kill Mother After Stove Blast Fatal to Baby, 2

Mrs. Bessie Eager, 22, died in Georgetown Hospital yesterday from burns, the second victim of the explosion which killed her 2-year-old daughter, Betty Anne.

Mrs. Eager and the baby were enveloped in flames Saturday at their home at Colvin Run, Va. The explosion occurred, it was said, when Mrs. Eager poured kerosene on kindling wood in the kitchen stove.

Thomas Eager, Patent Office examiner, whose valiant efforts failed to save his wife and child, was slightly burned. He received first aid at the hospital.

C. J. Brenner Dead Of Poison at 35; Purchasing Agent

Clarence Joseph Brenner, 35, 315 Evarts street northeast, was found dead from poison in a downtown hotel yesterday.

Brenner was found in bed after two friends failed to receive any answer at the room. He apparently had been dead since Saturday night.

Brenner was employed as purchasing agent for the United States News. His friends told police he seemed in good spirits on Saturday.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Peggy Rich Weds Her Fifth Husband

Peggy Lawton Rich, much-married former Follies beauty, took her fifth husband Saturday at Rockville, Md. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. Lloyd Black, pastor of the Rockville Christian Church and driver of the Rockville Volunteer Fire Department's truck.

Husband No. 5 was Mark Hanna Shull, of New York, who once directed an orchestra as Michael Tree. The couple spent yesterday with the groom's sister, Mrs. Marguerite Shull, at her home, 2828 Connecticut avenue.

The bride's next previous husband was Theodore Royce, British sportsman, whom she married in 1936. The marriage was annulled early this year. Her first husband was Freddie Rich, orchestra leader.

Numbers Czar Cries the Blues As New Law Curtails Income

Mickey McDonald Flat Broke, Gives Up His 12-Room Mansion.

Edward (Mickey) McDonald is experiencing the economic blues that, sooner or later, seem to hit every Washington gambler. The erstwhile big shot in the numbers racket has been telling other gamblers that he is "flat broke." He has been complaining, too, that nobody in the gambling world seems to care what happens to him.

On October 23, 1934, Mickey McDonald had reason to feel that he was the luckiest man in the world. That was the date of the celebrated "mistaken identity" murder. Early that morning six professional killers were hiding outside Mickey's large house near Takoma Park, waiting to kill him. Allen B. Wilson, newspaper route agent, drove up to deliver a paper. They killed Wilson, thinking he was Mickey.

That crime, more than any other, brought about the reform wave that now promises to make Washington a better place in which to live.

Backed by a new numbers law passed by Congress and signed last week by President Roosevelt, Washington police have started a drive that threatens to make the numbers racket as hazardous as hawking dope at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue.

A survey yesterday showed that many gambler already had withdrawn from the numbers field. For the most part they were men who originally had been making books on the horses, and handled numbers bets on the side. They never did like the numbers racket, some of them said yesterday, because it involved so many pennies, nickels and dimes wagered by the poor. Now they are going to restrict themselves to the ponies, which, by comparison, they regard as a wholesome source of revenue.

Way to Evade Law Sought.

Meanwhile, there is a coterie of numbers racketeers who, more or less determined to pursue the game as a living, are pondering ways to get around the new law. However, United States Attorney David A. Pine has announced that he feels the law to be foolproof, and has expressed confidence that the racket will be smashed here.

Two things have happened to bear out Mickey McDonald's plaint that he is flat broke.

He has given up his 12-room house on the outskirts of Takoma Park, for which he paid $100 a month rent.

On February 19 last, Mickey was arrested in Fredericksburg, Va., on charges of being drunk. He was taken in custody about 3 p. m. on a Saturday. Not having the necessary collateral money himself, he appealed to Washington friends to bail him out, but it was not until late Sunday night that one of them came to his aid. In the old days, when Mickey was wallowing in numbers profits, such a delay would have seemed incredible.

The killing of Allen Wilson by professionals who thought him to be Mickey revealed that the numbers, far from being a harmless gabling game in which the poor wagered pennies, nickels and dimes in the hope of getting a 600-to-1 payoff, was actually a vicious underworld racket that frequently led to bloodshed.

Washingtonians learned that one out of every there persons was playing the numbers, that the profits to the professional gamblers were tremendous, and that these gamblers and their lieutenants were carrying guns to protect themselves.

In the trial of the three men who were sentenced to life for Wilson's murder, it was testified that McDonald was marked for death because he had been giving information to the police about the gambling establishments of his rivals.

EDWARD (MICKEY) McDONALD

Albert Sutton, then living at Alban Towers, was named as the man who hatched the death plot. He is now serving a life sentence in the Maryland State Penitentiary.

Others Given Life.

Two others also were given life sentences, "Slim" Dunn and Ernest Myers, once known as the tri-State gangsters. Myers hanged himself in his cell.

"Tony-the-stinger" Cugino, trigger man in the Wilson murder, committed suicide in New York before the trial, and Claude Bailey, another of the murder mob, was killed before the trial while trying to escape from Lorton Reformatory.

The killings and suicides in the Washington gambling fraternity have, in the past 10 years or so, constituted morbid proof that crime does not pay. Eddie Killeen, once the overlord of gambling in Washington, was killed by his paramour; Frank McCormick, the most colorful of the city's bookmakers at one time, died penniless in a New York avenue rooming house; Carroll Peyton (Nubby) Nuckels, recently blew out his brains, and Willie Carroll hanged himself with a strap.

Jimmy La Fontaine, owner of the notorious casino on Bladensburg road just over the District line, was kidnaped a few years ago, and an erstwhile lieutenant of his, Milsie Henry, was murdered. A number of lesser-known gamblers also have been shot to death.

Meanwhile Sam Beard, the last of the powerful gambling barons in Washington, is rounding out a sentence in Atlanta Penitentiary, and probably wondering how he is going to make a living when he gets back.

In Atlanta, too, is Charles (Rags) Warring. He is there in connection with a shooting case. But more grief awaits him, for last week the grand jury indicted him and two of his brothers, Leo and Charles, on charges of conspiracy to defraud the Government by income tax evasion. They were accused of failing to report $164,000 in net profits over a period of three years, much of which, it was alleged, went to police officers for "protection."

Altogether the picture is gloomy not only for Mickey McDonald, but for all those who have been making a living on wagers and percentages.

All Bids for 8 Of 12 U.S. Ships Turned Down

Seven Companies Asked as Much as 68% Higher Than Winning Builder.

The United States Maritime Commission has rejected all bids for the construction of eight of the 12 cargo vessels on which it opened bids February 1, it was announced yesterday by Chairman Emory S. Land.

This action was the sequel to a letter which former Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy, now Ambassador to the Court of St. James', wrote to President Roosevelt on February 17 warning that "unless shipbuilding costs can be brought down far below those quoted by the larger yards, there will be no American merchant marine worthy of the name."

The Maritime Commission recently approved the bid of the Tampa Shipbuilding and Engineering Co. for construction of four of the 12 cargo vessels, but the award is being held in abeyance until the company makes financial arrangements satisfactory to the commission to insure the completion of the ships.

Some 68 Per Cent Higher.

The Tampa firm's bid was $7,262,652, or $1,815,663 apiece, for building the four vessels with Diesel propulsion. Bids by seven other companies were as much as 68 per cent higher.

Admiral Land yesterday disclosed that for the past several weeks the Maritime Commission has been trying to induce other bidders to reduce their prices so that contracts could be awarded for all the 12 vessels.

"The commission approached the problem," he said, "from the standpoint of the 'prudent businessman' described in the merchant marine act in an effort to avoid readvertising for bids, and also to find a way of obtaining more reasonable bids in the future. It is obvious that ships built at the prices quoted could not be operated successfully as a commercial proposition.

"Excellent Co-operation."

"The shipbuilders gave us excellent co-operation. Our negotiations resulted in materially lowering the prices bid and, while modifications and concessions were made in te matter of specifications they were not such as to impair the overall efficiency of the design of the vessel.

"From the progress that was made it was apparent that these negotiations, which are of the type commonly encountered in private business transactions, would have produced satisfactory results, and contracts could have been awarded for the other eight vessels, but in surveying the legal phases of the matter, it was decided that the clauses of the act, as well as other statutes governing competitive bidding on Government contracts, made the contemplated procedure doubtful from a legal standpoint.

"Accordingly, the commission reluctantly determined to reject all bids on the eight ships and re-advertise, including four more in the new invitation."

Bids rejected by the commission were submitted by United Shipyard, Inc., New York; Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co.; Sun Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., Chester, Pa.; Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, New York; Hess Weld & Ship Barge Corporation, Philadelphia; General Engineering & Dry Dock Co., Oakland, Calif.

West Point for Dancers Suggested at Session

New York, April 10 (AP).—A proposal that the Federal Government establish a national dance academy, patterned after the naval and military academies, came today from the National arts conference. Donald Grant, president of the Dancing Teachers' Business Association, said he had worked out the plan with Ruth St. Denis and suggested an academy with provisions for 2,500 students be established.

Chickasaw Maiden Will Lead Corn Dance in Folk Festival

PRINCESS ATALOA.

Ataloa, From Oklahoma Tribe, Will Also Sing Songs and Tell Legends From Rich History of Her People.

Ataloa, a Chickasaw maiden who has been a leader in the movement to perpetuate and develop the Indian folk arts, will eppear at the fifth annual National Folk Festival at Constitution Hall May 6, 7 and 8.

She will sing some Indian songs, tell some of the legends of her people and lead the large group of Indians from different tribes in the corn ceremonials which will be a festival highlight.

Ataloa, who is entitled to the title of princess but does not like it, has just completed some research on Indian culture and art under fellowship from the Rockefeller Foundation.

She believes that the richness of Indian culture should be preserved in the arts of present-day America. She has little regard for the tendency to set Indian pottery on shelves as if it were something that has outlived its usefulness.

Her Chicasaw lodge in Oklahoma is filled with Indian treasures, among them a pot which her great-grandmother carried on the "Trail of Tears" over which the Chickasaws were pushed West in the 1820's.

Ataloa turns all her spare money into scholarships for Indians. At one time 50 girls were attending Bacone College, Okla., on money she made lecturing.

The corn ceremonials in which she will lead the tribes here for the festival will include the ceremonies that grew up around planting, cultivating, harvesting, feasting and giving thanks.

"The corn dances are universal with the Indians. The members of all tribes know it," she says.

The National Folk Festival is sponsored this year by The Washington Post National Folk Festival Association.

Fire, Poison, Gas Used by Motorist To End Life in Car

Fire, poison, hot lead and monoxide, all self-administered, yesterday killed William A. Buchanon, 57, colored.

The man was found dead in his blazing automobile, parked in a garage in the rear of his home at 929 T street northwest. He was slumped over the wheel, a bullet wound in his heart, an empty poison bottle and a .32-caliber revolver beside him. The car's motor was running.

Firemen called to extinguish the blaze found Buchanon. They said that flames had burned parts of his clothing before they arrived. The garage was filled with carbon monoxide gas.

The man left a note to his wife, Florence. It said:

"Good-by, everybody."

Park Meter Sites Topic on Thursday

Location of parking meters will be discussed at a public hearing of the parking committee of the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Council at 8 p. m. Thursday in the board room of the District Building.

Pointing out that the bill empowers the Commissioners to experiment with meters in an area equal to the perimeter of four city squares, Whitney Leary, chairman of the traffic council, asked citizens for opinions as to the best site for such trials and suitable charges for parking.

Cells Frozen Too Fast to Die, Then Revived

Primitive Life Forms Live After 300 Degrees Below Zero.

By the Associated Press.

Pasadena, Calif., April 10.—A scientist and his wife have succeeded in keeping primitive forms of life 300 degrees below zero for as long as 100 hours and then restoring them to normal functions.

Looking for the answer to a century-old question of why such life forms occasionally could withstand extreme cold, Dr. Alexander Goetz, California Institute of Technology physicist, and his wife, Sylvia, found a way to "restore" to life 93 per cent of the cells they used.

They told today how they had been able to take a low form of life, yeast cells, from 45 degrees above zero, Fahrenheit, to 300 degrees below at a rate of 300 degrees a second.

Keeping the cells at this temperature for as long as 100 hours, they held life in suspension. Then, warming the cells as swiftly as they had cooled them, they restored the cells to their normal functions.

This offers support to a theory that the earth was "infected" with life from somewhere in space, possibly another planet, because these cells could withstand the cold encountered there—around absolute zero, or about 459 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit.

A still unanswered question is whether life thus suspended could withstand the violent attacks of radiation to which it would be subjected while hovering numberless centuries in space.

It previously had been shown that spores, a still lower form of life, exist in the stratosphere—proof that they can survive interstellar space.

"Death to primitive life from cold is due to physicochemical reactions," Dr. Goetz explained, "and we get the cells rapidly past the temperature where such reactions occur. Thus death apparently does not have time to take place."

Senate Flouts, House Weak on Economy Drive

Five Appropriation Bills in Conference Exceed Budget Total.

By the United Press.

The Senate is overriding President Roosevelt's stern demands that appropriations for the next fiscal year be kept within budget estimates while the House has made but feeble efforts to economize, a United Press survey last night disclosed.

Of the five major appropriation bills passed by the two chambers and now in conference for adjustment of differences, the Senate has added $61,869,655 to the House-approved measures, bringing the total appropriated thus far to $2,724,971,470, which is $30,716,722 more than budget estimates and an increase of $77,730,253 over the current outlays for the same activities.

House Cuts Eisimates.

The bills now in conference, the totals voted by each chamber, and the President's budget estimates follow:

	House	Senate	Budget
Independent Offices—	$1,410,628,515	$1,422,607,465	$1,414,210,535
Interior—	125,086,690	131,329,050	130,489,266
Navy—	549,195,494	549,227,842	564,406,461
Four departments: (Labor, Justice, Commerce and State)—	130,074,832	130,825,300	131,909,651
War Department—	448,116,284	490,981,813	453,288,835

The $77,730,253 increase over the current year's outlay was caused by a sharp step-up in budget estimates for a national defense program. The estimate for the Army and Navy departments for the 1939 fiscal year is $1,017,695,296, a hike of $85,888,834 over the present year.

Four Measures Signed.

Mr. Roosevelt stressed that Congress must stay within his budget estimates or accept full responsibility. The survey shows that the only four appropriations bills signed thus far by the President have been within budgetary bounds and below this year's total for similar activities.

These are the $47,255,155 District of Columbia, $1,403,683,526 Treasury-Postoffice, $28,089,009 first deficiency and $250,000,000 relief deficiency appropriations bills. Their aggregate is $1,729,027,690, which is $7,274,357 below budget estimates and $170,942,236 less than for the current year.

Five large appropriations measures for which the budget bureau estimates a total of 1,899,707,690 will be required as against $2,531,551,883 for the current year, have not been taken to the floor.

Relief the Issue.

These are the ones for the legislative establishments, Agriculture Department, civil activities of the War Department, relief and a final deficiency bill.

The budget bureau's total, however, is predicated upon a $1,000,000,000 relief bill, which may be boosted to $1,500,000,000 because of the business slump.

The relief issue will determine whether Congress will exceed the $7,077,000,000 record outlay voted for the current year last spring. If Congress can hold further spending within the outlined goals, it will end the session about $500,000,000 below last year's record.

However, the figures do not include the recent widening of Reconstruction Finance Corporation powers to lend up to $1,500,000,000 to aid industry or President Roosevelt's projected $1,500,000,000 Public Works Administration loan-grant program.

Man's Pants and Cash Taken in Street Holdup

Two colored men stripped William Cole, 1839 Fourth street northwest, of his trousers and robbed him of $3.35 at Rhode Island avenue and Marion street northwest, early yesterday. Cole said they struck him from behind, tore off his pants and fled.

Meanwhile, Samuel Grossman, Syracuse, N. Y., reported his auto broken into while it was parked near Fifteenth and L streets northwest and $100 worth of clothing and a diamond ring taken. Frank Basil, Helen, Ga., lost clothing and engineering books valued at $50 when his car was burglarized at Sixteenth and Euclid streets northwest.

Prisoner in Hospital After Hanging in Cell

Kessler E. Coffman, 29, of the 1200 block North Capitol street, was in Gallinger Hospital last night after he was found suspended from the bars of his Second Precinct Station cell by a shirt. He was cut down by the turnkey. Doctors said his condition was not serious.

Mrs. O'Connell Chosen.

Mrs. John M. O'Connell, wife of Representative O'Connell, has been appointed chairman of the Rhode Island Independence Day observance committee, William J. Crane, president of the Rhode Island State Society, announced yesterday. The committee will meet tonight at the Wardman Park Hotel to complete plans for the celebration May 4.

Girdler States He Will Fight Labor Board's Rehiring Order

Steel

dustries and violent tactics employed by the C. I. O. convinced us that its leadership is irresponsible.

"We are convinced the board's decision is wrong that the company must not negotiate with its employes who have formed their own independent labor organizations. They exist today as collective bargaining organizations, representing a major part of the company's employes, and should have as much right to act in that capacity as has any other labor group. The courts will have to decide this question."

Girdler said the company always has advocated the "general principle of reinstatement of men who went out on strike, as was clearly stated in Republic announcements during the course of the strike last summer. We have always said that the company would reinstate all men who had been on strike who were not guilty of violence or illegal acts."

He said the steel industry is "in the throes of a severe depression," and "our plants are operating at extremely reduced rates."

"However," he asserted, "it is astounding that the Labor Board should direct the re-employment of employes who were guilty of violence and who menaced the lives of their fellow workers during the strike.

"The Labor Board in its decision stated that the court records show that seven C. I. O. members or former members were indicted for the possession and use of explosives, and that some of these men are now in the Ohio Penitentiary; that 9 pleaded guilty to obstructing the United States mails; that 12 pleaded guilty for assault and battery; 67 pleaded guilty for rioting; 6 pleaded guilty to malicious destruction of property; 5 pleaded guilty to obstructing railroad tracks, and 9 pleaded guilty to carrying concealed weapons.

"And yet, in the face of these facts, the board decided that all these men should be re-employed with the exception of the six men, three of whom are now in the penitentiary, who pleaded guilty to the possession and use of explosives and one man who pleaded guilty to the destruction of property."

He said the board's charge that Republic was responsible for the Massillon riot was "wholly unsupported by the evidence."

"It is rather startling," Girdler said, "to find Republic held responsible for the actions of the Ohio National Guard and the constituted law enforcement authorities of Stark County and of the cities of Canton and Massillon."

"Another curious touch is given to the decision by the board's contention that Republic was responsible for the strikes in Little Steel by shutting down certain of its mills in Canton and Massillon. These mills were shut down just prior to the strike — one because of the breakdown of the plant's power facilities, and the other because of a strike which shut down the chief customer of that particular plant. The Massillon plant was opened and in operation before the strike started.

"The labor board says Republic shut down its mills and locked out its employes for the purpose of intimidating and coercing them not to join or to discontinue their membership in the C. I. O.

"The board says, 'this was the final blow. Under the circumstances the union could not hope to preserve itself without immediate resort to action.

"It is interesting to learn at this late date that the C. I. O. was at that moment in such danger of extermination that the closing of two small Republic plants involving 3,000 employes made it necessary to call a strike against Republic and three other steel companies involving 125,000 employes.

"The board takes the company to task for openly and publicly stating to its employes its position with respect to the issues of the strike. I do not believe that the courts will permit the Labor Board to nullify the right of free speech guaranteed by the Constitution.

"The issues brought to the fore by the decision are of vital importance to the rights of our employes, to the rights of our company and to the rights of all employes and all employers throughout the United States."

By the Associated Press.

Representative Hartley (Republican), of New Jersey, declared yesterday that business men are "bewildered" by the "uncertainties" of the New Deal.

He cited a recent decision of the National Labor Relations Board requiring the Inland Steel Co. to sign a contract with employes if they reach an understanding with them.

The Congressman declared Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, asserted in 1935 that the National labor relations act, of which he was the author, required no employer to sign any type of agreement.

"Apparently Senator Wagner was mistaken in what he thought was written into his own bill, and he must have a feeling akin to sympathy for the bewildered businessman who doesn't know what it is all about," Hartley said.

C. I. O. Meets Here Tomorrow.

By the United Press.

Leaders of all the C. I. O.'s 35 national and international unions have been summoned to confer with John L. Lewis here tomorrow on organizing campaigns and the effects of the recession.

They are expected to formulate and indorse a large Federal spending program in line with Lewis' demand for a $3,000,000,000 WPA appropriation.

and dived in fully clothed.

But the drowning lad was sucked down by swift undertow currents several times before they were able to grasp his clothing and pull him ashore. The Marines left the scene without identifying themselves.

Meanwhile, Jimmy had jumped on his bicycle and gone for help to a fire station in the 1700 block of Lanier place northwest. A rescue squad reached the scene almost as soon as the boy had been taken from the water. Firemen applied artificial respiration for more than 45 minutes in a vain attempt to save the child.

Mrs. Benjamin Wenit, the boy's mother, arrived as rescue workers fought to revive him and pleaded with the men to save her son's life. She was taken from the scene and treated at her home for hysteria.

The boy's father, an employe of the Government Printing Office, was in Baltimore at the time of the accident and was not notified until several hours later. Richard was the only child.

The Jones boy, sobbing and crying, was confined to his home and not informed of his friend's death. The two children had been friends at the Cooke School, where both were students.

"He's my best buddy," the boy cried. "What will I do if he dies?"

ing" be stopped. He said in a statement that "all the fears and uncertainties harassing business arise primarily from the disturbing budget outlook."

"The real need of the country today remains what it has been from the very beginning of the Roosevelt depression—absolute and unequivocal assurance from the White House that Government spending will be brought some day within the capacity of the people to pay taxes," Snell said.

"Congress, supported by an overwhelming majority of the people, now has turned back the reckless advance of New Deal experimentation. But it yet remains for President Roosevelt, through a clear declaration of constructive fiscal policy, to start the country forward toward recovery."

Byrd persistently has opposed the Administration's spending-to-prosperity policy, and, to some extent, has been joined by Senator Carter Glass, the senior Senator from Virginia. Glass, in his role as chairman of the powerful Senate Appropriations Committee, will be among the Congressional leaders with whom the President will discuss his spending plans today.

Other conferees will include Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky; Senator James Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina; Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee; Chairman Edward T. Taylor (Democrat), Colorado, of the House Appropriations Committee; Representative Cliftin A. Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia; House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn (Democrat), Texas; Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins and Acting Director of the Budget Daniel W. Bell.

Prior to this conference President Roosevelt will survey the legislative situation, complicated by the crushing defeat of the Government reorganization bill in the House, with Vice President John N. Garner, Speaker William B. Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama; Barkley and Rayburn. Among the subjects expected to be discussed are the tax revision bill, approved by the Senate Friday, and wages and hours legislation.

Details of President Roosevelt's new recovery plans have not been made knwon, but it is understood they call for loans of $1,500,000,000 to States, municipalities, political subdivisions and to big and little business; noninterest bearing loans of $1,500,000,000 for public works, and a relief appropriation of $1,250,000,000 for the first seven months of the 1939 fiscal year.

Separate treatment of the financially depressed railroad industry will be recommended by the President in a message to Congress this week.

Heat Forum Tomorrow.

A forum discussion of heating and ventilating problems will be held tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the Department of Commerce auditorium, Fourteenth street between Constitution avenue and E street northwest. The meeting is under the auspices of the advisory committee of the District of Columbia Health Department.

sentation on the pension board.

8. An eight-hour day completed within a 10-hour span for transportation men.

9. Hire and fire on seniority basis. No firing without union consent.

10. No classification of shopmen below second class.

11. No shopmen to work trippers.

12. Forty-hour and five-day week for shopmen.

"Startling," Says Merrill.

E. D. Merrill, president and general manager of the Capital Transit Co., said last night that he knew nothing about the projected mass meetings and recruiting by the C. I. O. Told about the latter's program, he said:

"That would mean a startling increase in costs. I see no reasons for a 15 per cent increase in pay in the present circumstances. Factories are laying off men and workers in some cases are taking a reduction in pay to hold on to their jobs.

"This company has granted two pay increases in the last few years, one amounting to $800,000, in 1935, and another amounting to $220,000, in 1937. As a matter of fact, the pay roll has increased $2,000,000 since 1933."

C. I. O. Confident.

Any increased costs at this time, Merrill said, would have to be met by increased fares or a reduction in service, which would mean less employment. He made it clear that he was not indulging in a union controversy, but simply outlining the economics in the case.

C. I. O. spokesmen expressed confidence that by Wednesday a majority of the employes of the Capital Transit Co. would designate the C. I. O. unit as their sole bargaining agent, forcing an election within 30 days. Cards expressing preference for the C. I. O. are being circulated among the workers.

Contest Ended April 1.

The Capital Transit Co.'s three-year contract with the A. F. of L. Union expired April 1, and a temporary extension is now in force. John Cookman, business agent, and other representatives of the A. F. of L. unit are now working out terms for a proposed new three-year contract.

Cornelius McGillicuddy, national organizer for the C. I. O. transport union, indicated last night that C. I. O. sympathizers among local transport workers probably would vote for the contract negotiated by the A. F. of L.

"The company," he said, "has made sweeping concessions because of the pressure of our organizing campaign."

Higher Fares Opposed.

President Merrill, however, said he knew of no "sweeping concessions."

Representatives of the car-and-bus-riding public, asked about the scrap last night, said in some cases that they were in sympathy with the C. I. O. attitude toward one-man cars. All, however, were opposed to any program that would result in higher fares.

Women With Writs Held as Vagrants

Vagrancy charges were placed against 12 women yesterday following the wholesale appearance of "six-hour" writs at police headquarters.

The women were seized in a series of forays by the pick-up squad. Forty-two colored men also were arrested in five raids.

Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon, chief of the squad, said two of the women had the writs in their pocketbooks at the time of their arrests. The writ requires the police to charge or release prisoners within six hours.

As an inventor he is best known for the "Cottrell precipitator," an electrical device for removing solid matter, such as dust particles, from gasses and smoke. His work with precipitation won him the Perkins award in 1919. Last year he was given the Washington award for engineering, the first recipient of which was Herbert Hoover.

Dr. Cottrell has turned over the patents for his discoveries to Research Corporation, a nonprofit organization whose proceeds are devoted to scientific study. In addition to his work with Research Corporation, he serves as unofficial consultant to the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Department of Agriculture's nitrogen research laboratory.

He has been ranked by Mme. Curie and Sir Oliver Lodge as one of the world's three greatest chemists. He came to Washington from the West Coast in 1911 to become chief physical chemist and later director of the Bureau of Mines.

Dr. Cottrell will receive the award at the institute's annual dinner to be held in Atlantic City May 14.

Last year's medal went to Dr. James F. Norris, professor of organic chemistry at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Previous medalists have been Andrew W. Mellon and Richard B. Police Investigate Death at Tavern

The death of Levi Alexander, 36, farmer of Riverdale, Md., early yesterday in a beer tavern near his home was being investigated by Prince Georges County police last night.

Sergt. Ralph Brown said when he arrived at the scene, Alexander was lying on the ground outside of the establishment. The man was pronounced dead by Dr. Martin J. Keane, of Riverdale, who said a dislocated neck was the cause of death.

Police said they had been unable to learn whether Alexander had been injured in a scuffle or whether he had fallen down a flight of stairs. An inquest will be held by Acting Coroner Fred C. Lutz, of Riverdale.

"Day Of The Greater Reich."

Millions of Germans went to the polls yesterday to confirm the seizure of Austria. There is little interest in the outcome of the voting for it has never been in doubt since the plebiscite was announced. The full strength of the powerful Nazi government was invoked to produce a favorable response. There was no pretense of giving the opposition a fair chance to make its influence felt.

Under this arrangement Austria's vote was even more nearly unanimous than Germany's. The net result has been to demonstrate the internal strength of the Nazi regime, and not to reflect the attitude of Austria toward union with the Third Reich, whatever that attitude may be. The Austrians had only one choice—to accept the regime that has been forced upon them.

In spite of this undemocratic procedure, the demonstrations which led up to the plebiscite were an impressive indication of the strength which the Nazi regime has attained. Chancellor Hitler's final campaign speech was a paean of praise to himself. His tendency to identify his own policies in the subjugation of Austria with the will of God represents an extreme form of mysticism that is characteristic of this dictator. It would be a serious mistake to minimize the foresight he has demonstrated in consolidating the confused elements of post-war Germany.

Under the Hitler regime, as the Fuehrer pointed out, Germany has not relied upon help from abroad. She has sought rehabilitation from within. In a desperate situation the forces of a disorganized nation were unified. Deplorable means to attain that end have frequently been employed. For the time being, however, those means are undoubtedly overshadowed in the minds of many Germans by the unity and strength that has been achieved.

The Fuehrer was justified also in calling attention to the "synthesis of 'social' and 'national'" under his regime. In many instances the former Socialists of Germany have come to accept the Nazi movement as a means of attaining some of their objectives. Hitler's rule has aimed first at the development of a powerful state under the domination of an autocratic party. But this program has also been tied in with projects to relieve unemployment and extend social benefits.

These aspects of the Nazi movement, as contrasted with the previous confusion in Germany, go a long way toward explaining the enthusiasm which the government can generate on an occasion such as this Austrian plebiscite.

Unjustified Opposition.

Representatives Howard W. Smith and David J. Lewis have announced their intention to object to the income tax proposal contained in the District revenue bill when it comes up for discussion today. Mr. Smith represents the Eighth District of Virginia and Mr. Lewis the Sixth District of Maryland. Both districts include suburbs in which thousands of Federal employes working in Washington have their homes. The two Congressmen seek to protect these non-residents from taxation by the District.

If it were a matter of double taxation, the Congressmen would have a good case. But under the contemplated plan, a person employed in Washington but living outside its boundaries where he pays a State income tax of $20, for example, would owe only $3 to the District if his assessment here totaled $23. This arrangement would hold however, only if the State in question reciprocated the terms. If its special income tax to relieve unemployment is to be extended next year, Maryland might well remember this point—granted the District tax becomes law.

A letter addressed by Representatives Lewis and Smith to all members of the House declares that any tax on Government salaries except the Federal income tax is "a rank injustice and totally indefensible." Apparently the Congressmen are willing enough to see non-Government salaries taxed to maintain the Nation's Capital. There is no logic in making such a distinction. Federal employes, whether or not they reside within the District, use Washington streets, drink its water, call on its Police Department, and some even send their children to its schools. They may properly be expected to make some contribution toward meeting these expenses.

Messrs. Lewis and Smith, moreover, exaggerate the scope of the tax. They ask all Congressmen to oppose the proposal because "all of us have constituents who earn their salary (sic) from the Federal Government but are not residents of the District of Columbia." The implication seems to be that any and every person drawing Federal pay would be taxed under the proposed District law. This is not the case. The only non-resident income to be affected by the proposal would be that derived from property owned or services performed within the District.

A Sound Tax Bill.

The tax measure approved by the Senate Saturday rightly deserves the sobriquet of "business recovery bill" given it by Senator Pat Harrison. Its enactment would mean the elimination of tax handicaps which have very definitely tended to penalize business and industry and have thus hindered the return to better times.

Outstanding, in this connection, is the proposed elimination of the undistributed profits tax and the substitution therefore of a flat 18 per cent tax on corporations with incomes exceeding $25,000. This move marks a welcome return to the older and wiser practice of levying taxes primarily for the sake of revenue rather than ulterior ends. In this particular the Senate's action constitutes both a gallant admission of previous error and a healthy and democratic readiness to learn by experience.

The Senate also deserves commendation for voting down the proposal that the revenue measure be saddled with processing taxes entirely out of keeping with the nature of this recovery bill. In voting the Borah amendment stipulating that the income from future issues of Federal securities shall be taxable, rather than tax-exempt as at present, the Senate again moved in the right direction. Yet the sad fact must be recognized that the amendment would lock the stable doors after a large number of horses have already escaped. In view of the vast total of Government flotations issued during recent years such a provision, had it been in force five years ago, would today bring in a large volume of much-needed revenue.

The defeat of the La Follette amendment broadening the income-tax base by lowering present exemptions cannot be regarded as final. Especially if Congress embarks upon a new spending program it may be compelled to reconsider what Senator La Follette has been vainly urging.

Nor are the provisions of the Senate bill all that they should be in the matter of the capital gains tax, another brake on recovery. The proposed flat rate of 15 per cent on gains from sale of capital assets held over 18 months represents a real improvement both over the existing arrangement and over the very complicated and undesirable provisions regarding capital gains taxation to be found in the House bill. But the time provision in the Senate measure is by no means wholly justifiable.

To make 18 months the time limit which determines whether a man is an investor or a trader seems unsound fiscally and socially. We are living in a rapidly moving world. For this reason the investor should be free to adjust himself to these changes without being penalized by the Government. He would thereby help create a natural rather than an artificial market and thus act as a stabilizer.

What constructive proposal can be offered? The time limit when the capital appreciation moves from the class of ordinary income to the segregated class of capital gains should not be over six months. This is the standard time which Congress itself devised in measuring the duration of a speculative turn under Section 16 of the SEC act. Why should not Congress continue its own precedent in measuring the duration of a speculative turn in its revenue legislation?

No time limit should be set to deter a long-term investor from selling any of his shares whenever prudent judgment dictates. There should be no penalty on selling nor a premium on holding when prudent investment judgment dictates otherwise. Under such conditions markets would cease to be artificial and subject to the recent wild fluctuations and, more important, Government revenues would cease to be as low as the nominal figures of recent years. If Congress wishes orderly, natural and stabilized markets and, simultaneously, abundant revenue, the 18 months' limit should be reduced to six months.

An opportunity to make this adjustment is now available with the measure going into conference. Of the two opposing bills the one which the Senate has approved is sounder and more conducive to recovery than that of the House. The council of wisdom suggests that the final measure should follow the line laid down by the Senate.

Mr. Kennedy's New Broom.

Few can rival the astonishing feat just performed by Joseph P. Kennedy, our new envoy to Great Britain. With one stroke of his ambassadorial broom, he has swept away the court presentation racket, one of the most curious and tenacious forms of snobism to be met with in our presumably democratic land. And in so doing Mr. Kennedy has not only made a multitude of his harassed contemporaries his very real debtors but has also earned the gratitude of his successors, whoever they may be.

The desire to be presented at the British court suggests the thought that, despite the rantings of our professional and amateur Anglophobes, the umbilical cord that once linked the United States to Great Britain has never wholly been cut. Even lady presidents of the D. A. R. were not immune from the urge to bow the knee to George III's successors. And to achieve the alleged eminence of being able to say that they had done so, women were not unwilling to go to extremes in putting pressure on the American Ambassador in London.

This year, for instance, one applicant collected indorsements from five Senators, six Governors and thirteen Representatives to make sure that her application to be one of the chosen few permitted to cross the threshold of Buckingham Palace would be favorably acted upon.

It is not surprising, therefore, that no matter how pressing were problems of state, Mr. Kennedy's predecessors sometimes had to drop everything to weigh the respective merits of Mrs. Zilch, of Podunk, and Mrs. Fortescue Marmalade, of Beacon Hill. And no matter how wisely they chose, women who were left out of the charmed circle were bitter about it. "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned."

The strange thing, however, is not that this whole tawdry business of obtaining invitations to the British court has been swept into the ash can where it belongs, but that it took so long to get it done.

A New Start In Order.

Every new development in the Jefferson Memorial controversy tends to support Representative Keller's demand for a fresh start on this project. Protests against the Boylan Commission's present plan have once more become so emphatic that it would probably be easier to start all over again than to attempt the necessary modification of decisions to which this body is committed.

Representative Boylan takes sharp exception to some of the points made by Gilmore D. Clarke, chairman of the Federal Commission of Fine Arts, in his letter of protest to the President. The fact remains, however, that the erection of a Pantheon on the edge of the Tidal Basin is vigorously opposed by the body of artists created by Congress to assure the harmonious development of Washington. Congress could not appropriate money for a memorial which the Fine Arts Commission considers "unsuitable" without seriously impairing the prestige of that advisory body and exposing the Capital City to haphazard planning.

As Representative Keller has pointed out, the first mistake in connection with the Jefferson Memorial came in the enactment of the law. Congress gave the Boylan Commission authority not only to select the site and the design of the memorial, but also to proceed with its construction. The only excuse for such a grant of power was to get the project built in a hurry.

But there is no occasion whatever to rush an undertaking of this sort. If its planning requires nine years, as did the Lincoln Memorial, nothing will be lost. The really important consideration is that, when finally approved, the monument to Jefferson shall be fitting in every detail. And this means that it must be appropriate to the site selected as well as to the character of the statesman to be honored.

Before any memorial to Jefferson is begun, therefore, it ought to have the approval of Congress, the Fine Arts Commission, the National Park and Planning Commission and the President. If objection be raised that it is difficult to secure the agreement of so many different groups, the answer is that only by checks and criticism from many sources can the country be assured that the finished product will be the best that can be devised.

The way to resolve the controversy over the Jefferson Memorial is to enact Representative Keller's proposed amendments to the original law. The commission would then be required to select its architect and sculptor by competitions and to submit its plans for the approval of Congress. To these might well be added an amendment requiring acquiescence of the Fine Arts Commission as to site and design before work on the memorial can proceed.

Following his experience with the Reorganization Bill, the President is going deep-sea fishing. Out there they may get away with the bait, but they won't upset the boat as well.

Another problem for the Brain Trust: What's the use of trying to prime the pump again if all it will bring up is muddy water?

At the rate France is going up the hill and down again these days she must be on a roller coaster.

Keeping Up With Demand.

From the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The remarks of Myron C. Taylor, retiring chairman of the board of the United States Steel Corporation, at the stockholders' meeting yesterday are entitled to a wider reading than they are likely to get. They throw a great deal of light on the industrial events of the last decade. By inference at least they suggest some of the needs of the present situation.

Taylor calls to the attention of his stockholders the tremendous capital investment it has been necessary for the corporation to make, not so much in the expansion of plant as in improvements which are essential to keep pace with changing demands. More than $500,000,000 has been spent since this program was initiated ten years ago, and even now the expansion is not completed.

This aspect of the corporation's activity is of interest and significance because the opinion is widely entertained that opportunities for productive employment of new capital no longer exist, which is another way of saying that our productive capacity is greater than our capacity to consume and that stagnation in the heavy industries follows as a matter of course.

Such clearly has not been the case with the largest of the steel companies.

Dramatic Criticism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congratulations to all those unable to get tickets to "You Can't Take It With You." There must have been many who felt as deflated as the group that sat near me. I've rarely seen so many faces registering pained effort to produce a genuine laugh. Their strained expressions remained during intermissions.

Of course there were one or two fleeting mirth-provoking seconds during the whole evening and of course the audience contained the usual number who laugh at everything but themselves.

A stale, conventional, commonplace plot and two-thirds of the acting either mediocre or sub-adolescent, it ran the course of the obvious and amateurish to be proverbially stilted "happy ending." Yes, it ended happily—pardon me—I mean happily and fortunately it ended. Then you can laugh, without being told to, at yourself and with the lucky guys who couldn't get tickets! BARBARA BARKER.

Depression Theory.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our Nation as a whole carries on from day to day in a state of nervous uncertainty as through depression we approach the brink of disaster.

Columnists, economists and politicians expound the causes and remedies for our unhappy situation, yet apparently none of them know, or if they do, they dare not intimate that which is so obvious to any intelligent person—that our economic scales are g r o s s l y weighted in favor of the owners of the means of production, thereby making possible the exploitation of the people by intrenched monopoly.

Clara Barton Date.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note an omission in your "Calendar of Events in April" of such national importance and daily reminder that it should stand permanently on any April calendar. It is the death of Clara Barton, founder, organizer and first president of the American Red Cross.

She died at Glen Echo, Md., on April 11, 1911. She was born on a Massachusetts farm on Christmas Day, 1821, and was 90 years old at the time of her death. Fifty years of this span were spent in humanitarian efforts, of which the Red Cross is her crown and glory.

I quote from the only poem depicting her amazing career:

Her years had but a decade more to run
To crown a century of immortal
span;
She waked . . . last time . . . to see the April sun
Anoint the willows where the Potomac ran
To mingle with the seas that clasp the world.
Tomorrow-planning birds peeped from the sill . . .
Beyond . . . the flag its brooding
rich hill.
What trumpet-call, drum-rattle, mortar-blast . . .
What beckonings, wails of woe
Came on the new spring breeze to bring at last
The old-time service call . . .
"O let me go!
O let me go!" . . . To bring aid to the dying! . . .
Cross-marked with blood we see her wide wings flying!

The Jefferson Memorial Plans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many of the objectors to the proposed memorial to Jefferson state the memorial will not be utilitarian, that it will be "just something to look at." Following the same line of reasoning, we could consistently advocate the destruction of all flowers in the city, and many other beautiful things.

I remember the clamor of objectors when the Lincoln Memorial was proposed and built ("Just a pile of marble"), and the same with respect to the Arlington Bridge. The same objectors shouted to high heaven when a few trees were removed from the Mall so that a better view could be had looking westward from the Capitol.

Plans to beautify the city always meet with objections from a loud minority. G. R. C.
Washington, April 9.

The Editor of The Post—Sir: Why do we in the United States so often spoil things by overdoing them? We now have a beautiful and impressive monument in the Lincoln Memorial in surroundings that are equally beautiful and appropriate. Why spoil the dignified effect by another memorial to Thomas Jefferson which will only serve to detract from the other by "too much of a muchness?"

Isn't the entrance to Arlington bad enough? Why spend millions when our budget is already so out of balance to build another white marble edifice which will add nothing to the beauty of the Capital? Why memorialize Jefferson with something that would have aroused his thrifty soul and his artistic taste to bitter antagonism?

If we must build a memorial to Jefferson why not consider what would have pleased that great Democrat? Jefferson loved beauty, but he loved usefulness as much. Is there not some better way of honoring his memory than a superfluous building in a spot that will do more to spoil an already lovely scene than it will to enhance its loveliness?

HARRIOT T. COOKE.
Washington, April 4.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There has been so much said against the proposed plan of the Jefferson Memorial and the newest site scheduled, I should like to speak for them.

The plans will add 300 per cent to the Japanese cherry trees, it seems to me. And as for columns and Grecian architecture, what in the world, in the way of architecture, is more beautiful? It is impossible for us to have too many noble, beautifully proportioned columns.

My people are all from the South, and it is well known what the South thinks of columns. I think all Southerners would love the proposed memorial, and we know Jefferson would, because it is just in the style he always designed (or adapted or took over entirely).

In the proposed site the memorial would cause the cherry trees, itself and all of the vicinity to be a real sanctuary—to liberty.
A WASHINGTONIAN.
Washington, April 8.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To my mind the much discussed Jefferson Memorial is one of the biggest pieces of tommy-rot that has ever been brought to the minds of the public.

Of course, I appreciate the fact that this well-meaning committee is attempting to praise and honor the dead, but is it not probable that if our noted leader were alive today he would so much prefer seeing that money put to a far more noble use? by more noble, I mean suffering humanity.

As everyone knows, our country today is in one of the worst conditions of its history, and the so many millions of dollars to be used in the Jefferson Memorial could be used to aid in raising the general morale of a greater part of our population. Of course, the construction of the memorial would afford employment for a small number of unfortunates, but there is no lasting benefit that can be gained. What of the great number of those who are unable to work? Why not build an institution where they may be cared for properly.

I should like to stress another point—that of the preference to natural beauty. Of course, an elaborate structure of marble may be called beautiful, but what is more beautiful than God's own creation of trees and fragrant flowers and grass? Those who are employed, I will wager, would appreciate very much more a place to enjoy the benefits of the great outdoors rather than to tramp on the hard surface of a magnificent marble monstrosity.

If these unnecessary structures must be made, can't they be postponed until some more fruitful and prosperous time in our land?
P. R.
Arlington, Va., April 8.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: So contemptuous appears Mr. Roosevelt of any idea older than the New Deal, as of March 4, 1933, that his subscription to ideas held over a century ago by L'Enfant is as complimentary as it is incredible. I refer, of course, to his recommendation to appropriate $500,000 to start the Jefferson Memorial, in a traffic-congested public p a r k which needs another memorial pile the way the three-legged boy in the circus needs two pairs of shoes. Presidential approval makes it unanimous; last year's outcry is like water over TVA dams.

Fights among architectural groups aside, chalk up another push in the face for our voiceless, voteless citizenry. Citizen approval of any site selected should be compulsory—common justice calls for nothing less. And it should be tabled entirely until the budget has been balanced. J. WINSTEAD.
Washington, April 7.

Britain's Tories.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What is the real basis of Tory England's present policy under Chamberlain? It is fear of Russia. Not that Russia threatens any of her territory. It is that Russia has "liquidated" her aristocracy by expropriating their lands.

Nothing like that has happened or is likely to happen in Nazi Germany or Fascist Italy, hence Chamberlain's leaning to them and against loyalist Spain because of the latter's sympathy with the Russian land policy. It is interesting to note that Tory England includes our expatriate Astors, owners of so much of New York, and their circle known as the "Cliveden Set."

Democracy in England is a veneer. Her real power is in the hands of the few who own her lands and to whom all the rest pay tribute increasing with the increase of her population.
FORMER BRITISHER.
Washington, April 7.

White House Vultures.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Gossips of the press and radio hover like craven vultures over the White House. Any slightly ambiguous word that the President may utter is avidly pounced upon and given the very worst interpretation that could possibly be placed upon it. Every move and every gesture that he makes is construed into something sinister, and presented to the gullibility of the people in the worst light they can conceive of.

If these distorters of the truth were to emphasize the good for his fellowmen that our brave leader is endeavoring to accomplish in the face of all the fiendish opposition he is meeting, they would do much to dispel the prevalent unrest of this Nation. Free speech is grand, but free speech ought to be true speech. FRANCES M. GOSS.

Congressmen's Loyalty.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Are the members of the Congress of the United States of America befuddled or am I?

That oft-repeated phrase, "Loyalty to Mr. Roosevelt" which occurs in their deliberations with respect to how they shall act upon his recommendations sounds ominous to me and more European than American. V. B. C.

The Post Impressionist

Coffee And—

THE first time we ate there was a rainy Sunday night, remember, and light from the plate glass window made a gay, irregular rectangle on the pavement I noticed that our waitress was a amateur.

Nothing about her suggested the typical waitress to whom long complaining years of bolting food Washington restaurants had accustomed us. Instead of a uniform, she was wearing a dark print dress and a perky little apron. Her movements were quick and unstudied, rather than deftly deliberate. She didn't bring us water and silently vanish to that unknown Stygian darkness that seems to claim waitresses when you are ready to order. This one smiled at us and said, "You are hungry?" And she took our order immediately.

Maybe it was the waitress who made us wonder about her coworkers. We noticed that the other two waitresses displayed a similar lack of professional experience. The boy behind the soda fountain, handsome, red-cheeked, black-haired and smiling, needed more than the white jacket he was wearing to turn him into the usual casual soda-jerker we knew. His eyes flashed brightly every time he spoke to the men perched on the stools. There was an eagerness about him that made his movements quick and pleasant.

"I bet," said Maggie, "that they are related."

I regarded the waitresses and the boy closely. Yes, there was a very marked resemblance. The girls seemed to be sisters, the boy the young brother. All of them spoke with accents.

When we were through eating, I realized we had scarcely spoken to each other. I know that I had been absorbed in watching the three waitresses and the boy behind the fountain. Even when we left the delicatessen I remembered them. I wondered where they came from and who they were and why they were restaurateurs. The girl looked as if they were more familiar with things like sewing, and keeping house, and making coffee for visitors who had come to see their parents, and going window shopping on sunny days. And the boy, I am sure, would have preferred to be attending a university, searching knowledge with a quick, sharp mind.

A few nights later we stopped in for coffee and sandwiches. It was late, and only one waitress was on duty. She seemed glad to see us. Maggie and I were very gay. The waitress seemed to lean toward us. In no time at all we were on friendly footing. When she was bringing me a second cup of coffee I asked her where she was from.

She said, "From New York." She put the coffee on the table and turned to go. "We're from Germany, really."

* * * *

I didn't say anything. What can you say to someone who came from Germany and still is precise in her English? After she left us we decided the sister and brother must be refugees—refugees from Hitler, Jewish refugees from Naziism. I looked at the waitress and couldn't help wondering what Hitler had cheated her out of. Had she had dreams of beauty, and of shining peace, and of a home, and of babies? I thought of my own dreams.

We got into the habit of going there frequently for late snacks. The boy always smiled a greeting. Sometimes we exchanged common places. Always I looked and wondered about them. They were the first refugees with whom I had ever come in contact outside of lecture halls. What did they think? What did they feel? How would I feel if I were forced to flee this country and seek refuge among strangers? The thought made me shudder. Never to see the curling ribbon of the Connecticut River winding around Springfield's shore. Never to stand on the summit of Mount Tom with the breadth of the homely valley before me. Never to . . . never to . . .

One night I asked the boy when he had he come over from Germany. In 1934, he said.

"Your whole family?" I asked.

He wiped the counter with a damp cloth. "My brothers, sisters and I were the only ones who could get out."

"Any friends of yours come with you?"

"Some of them. Some went to Barcelona."

"Barcelona." A nameless terror seemed right behind me.

I said, "Well, you're safe now. You're in the United States. Nothing can happen to you here."

He repeated, "'Nothing can happen to you here.' That's what we said in Germany the day before Hitler was made chancellor." He pushed the damp cloth over the clean counter aimlessly. "That's what my friends said when they went to Spain."

I picked up my change silently and left. Something unseen walked home with me.

Fair Enough

Hard Hollywood.

GRANTED THAT there are thousands of has-beens, never-wasers, mediocrities and downright failures in the so-called colony of the cinema in Hollywood, it is a strange fact that that community of artists contains few, if any, gay and regardless individuals. The poor are wretched because they are, by comparison, poor and yearning, envious, jealous, and ungenerous. The rich are self-conscious, jealous, worried and the prey of blackmailers, parasites, tax collectors and fears.

PEGLER.

Of course, this is a general observation, and I will grant that there must be a few individual exceptions. On the whole, however, Hollywood differs shockingly from Paris, Vienna and Greenwich Village as of old. Hollywood is hard, harsh, treacherous and avaricious and suffers from a lack of that bread-and-a-bottle comradeship, that great-hearted artistic warmth which melted the distinctions between rich and poor, between the masters and the unarrived in the Bohemias of which we have read so much.

The successful actor or writer reckons his standing by his salary and runs with people whose earnings are in his own brackets. But the actor knows that his career is short and is constantly fighting with his employers for more money, for better roles, for advantages too technical to be explained in a short piece. He may and often does hate the company for which he works and fights bitterly with the executives who employ him but detest him and constantly try to destroy him.

• • • •

THE WRITER'S JOB at $1,000 or $2,000 or more per week expires every now and again, and he has an agent to hustle up further short-term assignments. He becomes secretive, defensive, bitter. He fights with his wife and is divorced, and we in the rest of the country read of a settlement which reckons his pay at some stupefying figure and her alimony in proportionate amount.

Old friends of the $35-a-week days in the newspaper business picture him drinking wine on the brink of his swimming pool and decide that he has fallen for some cutie. Maybe so, but it is more likely that he has just become unbearable, and she, too, under the strain of the competition.

They hate to fail. They fear failure, and a reduction in price may be resisted for many weeks at nothing per week. Of course, a man gets drunk in such circumstances. My God, he owes last year's income taxes, and what can he do if he washes out entirely? Go back to night police or the rewrite battery at a newspaper salary? Unbearable! He can't tolerate even himself, whom he admires preposterously.

The dirty little parasites who chisel and blackmail swarm like midges on a June night in the woods. One must spend money at so-and-so's night club or donate one's services to some commentator's program or send Christmas and birthday presents to some contemptible grafter with a column of type or take the risk of a bad report. So they think, anyway. As a matter of truth, the blackmailers, all of them well known to the profession, realize that their threat is largely imaginary.

Comparatively few people hear their radio remarks or read their malicious digs in print, and it is not actually necessary to squander money at their dives, to donate professional services to shows for which they grab the pay or to send them presents at Christmas or on their constantly recurring birthdays. But as long as the poor ham thinks it is necessary the graft is good.

• • • •

BUT THE Hollywood people are afraid. Greedy and without confidence in their ability, they pay, one way and another, and look on aspirants with suspicion and run with their own financial set lest it be thought that they are losing caste.

The harshness, the wolfish individual suspicion and loneliness of the colony are apparent at once and hard to understand at first. Old friends from back yonder are met at arm's length after years for fear of rivalry. Only a few great souls with great earnings have the bigness and courage to be kind to a newcomer who may want no help. Successful men and women fear, hate and suspect one another.

Get drunk? Yes. Some nights, between pictures maybe. But not with the fellow in the next booth who is out of a job or a Johnny-come-lately fighting his way up. He may be a genius, a great actor, director, dramatist or designer, but don't encourage him. Tell him nothing, mislead him if possible, for he may be after your contract.

Art? Comradeship? A bottle of wine and a hunk of cheese with an unknown?

Where do you think you are? On the Left Bank?

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Traffic Mother Goose.

("Nursery Rhymes Used for Traffic Signs."—Headline.)

There was a man in our town—
He isn't there today;
He didn't heed the traffic light—
That's why he's gone away.
And when he reached the Golden Gate
He took another blow;
He didn't heed the signal there
And thought the "Stop" was "Go."

II.

Hickory, dickory, dock,
The mouse parked in a block
That bore signs clear
"No Parking Here,"
Which makes him a rat, by the clock.

III.

Little Boy Blue come blow your horn,
The red light is on, your patience is worn;
Blow it all day; it will do you no good,
But, driving a car, you've a notion it should.

IV.

Little Jack Horner
Stood on a corner,
Awaiting the traffic light;
He started to run
When he got the green one . . .
But a truck mowed him down in full flight.

V.

Old Mother Hubbard
To take her dog for a hike;
They were knocked for eight loops
By that wildest of goops—
A guy on an unlighted bike!

VI.

Little Miss Muffett
Thought she would rough it;
She started to cross Broadway
In traffic congestion
And now there's no question
She'll be in a cast all through May.

VII.

There was an old woman who lived in a shoe,
She lived to be eighty, as few of us do;
She stuck to the shoe through the day and the night—
A shoe is one place where the traffic is light.

VIII.

Mary had a little lamb.
Its fleece was white as snow,
But every time it saw a "Stop"
It thought it was a "Go."
It followed her to school one day;
The "red" it went right through . . .
Now Mary's lamb is nothing but
A dish of mutton stew.

IX.

Hark! Hark! The sirens bark—
The autos are passing through town;
Lock all the children in the house
And pull the shutters down.

Nazi 'Elections'

Virtual Unanimity In Earlier Vote Achieved By Threats And Coercion, Statements In German Press Reveal.

By S. Miles Bouton.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE NAZI "election" has, of course, resulted in an overwhelming vote for Hitler, "the Liberator of Austria," as he modestly terms himself. It may finally equal the vote reported for him on March 29, 1936, following hte invasion of the Rhineland, which was 98.75 per cent.

Such an approximation to unanimity is unthinkable and incredible in any country in the world. It is a manifest absurdity in a country where hundreds of thousands of citizens have gone through concentration camps or been otherwise punished, many of them terribly beaten—a country in which, only some five years ago, 40 per cent of the entire population was made up of Marxists, and another 10 per cent of Roman Catholics and Democrats. What has happened to the Catholics must have ranged them, as far as opposition to Hitlerism is concerned, on the side of the Marxists and Democrats.

'Ja' Only Indicated On Earlier Ballots.

In three earlier "elections"—on November 12, 1933, August 19, 1934, and March 29, 1936—ballots bore the names of the representatives of only one party, Hitler's party. There was only one circle with the word "Ja"; there was no way of voting against the government except by mutilating the ticket, leaving it blank, or writing the word "Nein." Moreover, at the last election American correspondents who visited the polling places in Berlin and Frankfort were told that all blank ballots had been counted for Der Fuehrer.

It may be of interest to glance at Nazi methods of getting a favorable vote. Six days after the election of November, 1933, the Sonneburg Anzeiger reported:

"Nine 'no' votes were cast in Seelow at the Reichstag election. Through the zealous efforts of wide-awake voters and observers it has been possible to learn who five of these men were. They were Erich Wichmann, of Seelow, bank clerk, who was summarily discharged on November 13; Arthur Schmidt, laborer; B. Haenisch, laborer, and Wilhelm Koch, teamster, all of Seelow, and M. Mickley, of Gross-Neuendorf, laborer.

"All five traitors were led through the streets and had to wear placards reading, 'I am a traitor. I voted "no." I voted for France.' The SA band led the procession. It stopped at the market place and each had to call out his name and say loudly: 'I am a traitor. I voted "no." All the criminals were then photographed."

The Frankfort Gazette reported on November 27, 1933:

"Two persons, bearing on the breast and back placards with the words in large letters: 'I am so despicable that I did not vote,' were led through the streets of the village of Puppen, Ortelsburg. A drummer preceded the procession."

The Palestine Rundschau reported on November 14:

"Two inmates of the Sonnenwende Sanatorium admitted publicly that they had voted 'no.' They were, therefore, led through the city and thus openly stigmatized as traitors. The police had a hard time preventing the indignant onlookers from assaulting them."

Four days before the election the SA detachments in Trier received orders to arrest all persons who did not vote or voted against Hitler. The Thyssen works in Muelheim (Ruhr) summarily discharged all employes who did not vote at the 1933 election.

Election In 1934 Followed Same Lines.

THE FOREGOING are but a few typical reports of many concerning the November election. Here are some from the election of August 19, 1934:

More than 50 per cent of the voters in the Catholic hospital of the Sisters of Mercy in Duesseldorf voted against Hitler. Two days after the election the physicians' association of the city sent out the following circular to all members:

"At the election on Sunday, August 19, the Marien Hospital cast a vote of more than 50 per cent against the Leader and National Socialism. This result is a challenge to the profession, the city and also the state. The Duesseldorf physicians will endeavor to avenge this unpatriotic attitude by the most drastic boycott of the hospital until it is economically destroyed. I therefore order that the sending of patients to the Marien Hospital be most strictly forbidden. I will make public the names of German physicians who send patients there despite the prohibition. (Signed) Dr. Seiler, chairman."

In Wattweiler, Palatinate, the burgomaster, in co-operation with the local SA leader, ordered all citizens to assemble in the public square on election day. All were then marched, with a band at the head of the procession, to the polling place. The burgomaster took his place at a table, read the names of electors, and each one had to make a cross in the circle under the eye of the burgomaster. The ballot was then handed to an SA man, who placed it in the ballot-box. The result was naturally a vote of 100 per cent for Hitler.

The SA leaders in Brunswick were told before the election that they must know the citizens of their respective wards so well that if a single vote was cast against the National Socialist ticket, they must be able to tell who cast it.

Rhineland Voting Similarly Dictated.

ON MARCH 7, 1936, Hitler marched troops into the Rhineland. An election was ordered for March 29 for "a Reichstag for freedom and peace." In view of the still uncertain attitude of the former Allies—the Nazis did not realize that the Quai d'Orsay was sacred and Downing street afraid, and hence that no brave action was to be expected from either source—the vote had to be practically unanimous. There are ways of assuring this in a dictatorship. A glimpse of some of those ways has been given above. There are others also.

Several days before the election, confidential instructions were issued to all Nazi district leaders (Gauleiter) by Dr. Robert Ley, Reich organization leader of the National Socialist Party at that time, in co-operation with Dr. Goebbels, propaganda minister. They read:

"1. A report on every non-voter is to be made to the head of the local group. These reports will be assembled by the district leaders.

"2. A report is also to be made to the same place on every voter who goes into a booth to make his ballot.

"3. Chief weight is to be laid on personal contact with the individual voter.

"4. Two slogans are to be used with the strongest emphasis:

"(a) Whoever does not vote is a traitor to his folk. He will be openly exposed to public contempt.

"(b) The German votes openly. Only traitors to their land and people hide in the darkness of a voting booth."

After further instructions regarding control of voters and special patrols of SA men in places suspected of harboring opponents of the government, the order continues:

"The police stations will deliver to the SS offices of their districts the lists which they keep of Communists, Socialists, Political Catholics and other suspicious persons. A part of the SA and SS, some in uniform, some in civilian clothing, will be ordered to watch passers-by in the streets."

An election with only one party name on the ticket, a muzzled press, torture or imprisonment for anyone daring to speak or vote against the ticket, is, of course, a farce. The Nazis will be impressed by it—which demonstrates how fanaticism destroys intelligence. And they will believe—sincerely, it must be presumed—that the rest of the world will be impressed by it. That is ascription to the world of an equal lack of intelligence. Coming from almost any other source, it would be an insult.

Heavy Frost Forecast For Virginia Today

Richmond, Va., April 10 (AP).—The United States Weather Bureau here predicted today that a heavy frost would cover most of the State early tomorrow.

Low temperatures will range, the bureau said, from 35 to 36 in the eastern section of Virginia to below freezing in western areas. There may be some damage to fruit trees, the bureau reported.

The Riddle Of The Business Cycle.

"THE GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH" is intended as a layman's primer of economics. It traces, in both text and a wealth of pictures, the economic cycle from 1922 to 1933. The gradual increase in production and in national income is shown by charts, pictures, and balance-sheets. Production increases, but consumption cannot keep up with it. Why? Because, some answer, technological developments steadily increase the amount of production and at the same time decrease the number of workers necessary and consequently decrease the purchasing power of the nation. Because, others answer, an increasingly large proportion of the nation's income becomes excess profits, to be frozen in nonproductive investments or into further productive plants and equipment, without a corresponding increase in wages and purchasing power.

At any rate, the two curves, of production and of consumption, mount steadily higher, but with that of consumption lagging always behind. Then comes the crash. The overinflated credit structure tumbles; wages are cut; purchasing power declines, and the country finds itself back at the bottom of the cycle again.

MR. SPENCER'S TEXT is scrupulously fair. He tries to interest each of the stages of the cycle from the point of view of each of the leading schools of economic thought. In conclusion, he reviews the solutions and explanations offered by the conservative, the liberal and the radical.

In this objectivity lies the real value of the book. Any thoughtful reader, faced with the facts and figures offered in such clear and comprehensive manner, is bound to ask himself certain questions, to review his own interpretations, and to clarify his own opinions of these matters which so intimately concern all of us.

Do we have to accept this ever-recurring cycle of depression, boom, and again depression, with all its attendant misery and suffering, as the inevitable working of economic laws over which we have no control?

Is the system of free competition and laissez-faire responsible for our present economic chaos?

Was the boom era of 1929 really a period of national prosperity, if 16,000,000 families received an income insufficient to maintain health and decent comfort? Should it be our only objective, to return to the conditions of that period?

Is a system wholly good which allows one-tenth of 1 per cent of American families to receive virtually as much income as the bottom 46 per cent?

• • • •

AND, AS A MORE IMMEDIATE PROBLEM, whence comes the momentum necessary to get out of the trough of a depression? From an increase in the national purchasing power? But the pump has been primed with billions of dollars and still only a thin trickle of water comes out.

Any book which will cause the general public to think, and to think with some background of accurate information, on national economic problems, should be of value. The present volume is admirably fitted for that purpose. The photographs, one must admit, are a bit disappointing. One inevitably compares them with those of "You Have Seen Their Faces," which compose a great sociological document. These do not.

Of Money & Credit

By Didier Lazard

M. CHARLES RIST, former professor of economics at the law faculty of the University of Paris, member of the Institut de France, has been during the last 15 years, among other official activities, vice governor of the Bank of France and many times financial expert for the French government. The book he has just published is a history of the doctrines of credit and money, from John Law to the present times.

"This is no book of erudition," he says in the foreword. And that is true. For the theoretical understanding of the author and his practical experience are continuously checking up each other. Nobody could be therefore better qualified to write such a book, wherein he shows, on the one hand, the complexity and also the permanence of financial difficulties, and on the other hand, the small number of viewpoints and the periodical errors made by economists and statesmen who forget history's lessons.

IN THIS BOOK, a first thing of importance is the care taken by the author with his terminology. Indeed, if credit and money problems are so difficult to analyze scientifically, if they provoke so many discussions whenever they are met, perhaps it is because nobody gives the same value to the words that are used. Coin, currency, checks, are they just three sorts of money? Are some of them credits? What is the comparative importance of the various characteristics of a money—for instance as a medium of exchange, or as a standard of value? All that has to be decided once and for all, prior to any study.

M. Rist, through his thorough knowledge of theories and facts, men and events, in France, England and America, is also particularly able to make all sorts of comparisons that may help understanding the current aspects of very old problems. Thus, the open market policy is shown to have been used in London since about 1730, and frequently criticized. Likewise, when times of prosperity or depression have occurred in the past, people have always been convinced that they were contemplating a permanent trend, and that no reversion could ever be hoped for or feared. Finally, in the course of his various chapters, M. Rist is led to give his opinion regarding such questions as stabilization of price level, regulation of money, gold policy, or any other form of economic nationalism.

As an historian, M. Rist evaluates doctrines and methods of government, according to their results. "If it were orthodoxy," he says, "to rally, among these methods, the ones that have proved successful, I should accept such a qualification." Thus, his book, summarizing the economic experiences of the two last hundred years, may be really considered as a study of first magnitude.

More About Money

By Josef E. Cellermann

DR. JOHN DONALDSON, professor of political economy of George Washington University, is a well-known authority on international economic policy. He served as economic adviser with the War Trade Board, Shipping Board, Department of State, American Delegation to the Washington Conference, Department of Commerce and other agencies. His last governmental connection was as director of research and statistics to the special adviser in foreign trade of President Roosevelt.

In fall of 1935 the Institut fur Weltwirtschaft in Kiel (a semiofficial research foundation in world economics) decided to publish a special volume on devaluation, to which one writer from 13 countries was asked to present a study. Dr. Donaldson was selected as the American contributor. His paper on the devaluation of the dollar has now been expanded into a study of the new national and international monetary system.

Dr. Donaldson selected the period from the spring of 1933 to the autumn of 1936, as best adapted to the analysis of recent monetary behavior of the dollar and the subsequent international repercussions. Concentrating on that period the author shows the theory and practice of currency management as practiced by the United States and the various foreign nations. He concludes his study saying: "There is no doubt that these arrangements do comprise a scheme for a considerable degree of stabilization—a stabilization of course at new, not old, levels."

This study of the dollar is concise and complete. It deals with basic concepts; at the same time it introduces the reader to new national and international monetary system. It weaves a welter of disorganized facts into a scientific pattern.

The book merits careful study by every economist, foreign trader and tanker.

Text of Byrd Fiscal Attack

Fears Debt of 45 Billions by July; New Deficit of 5 Billions.

The statement of Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, concerning the Administration's reported new spending program, follows:

Authoritative reports indicate that the Administration will recommend another huge new spending program of $4,000,000,000 in an effort to again "prime the pump" and spend ourselves back to prosperity on borrowed money.

I stand firmly to prevent any American suffering for the necessities of life, but the time has come to realize that mounting deficits and continuing for nine years to recklessly spend more than we have, contributes to the lack of confidence that stagnates the business world of America today. Appropriations for relief already exist and with economical and frugal management will go far to prevent actual distress.

With this spending program, if adopted by Congress, in view of the reduced revenue by reason of the depression, I predict the deficit for the fiscal year beginning the first of next July will be the largest in our history and will reach $5,000,000,000 or more. Without appropriating a dollar additional to the budget already before us the deficit in 1938 will be at least $2,000,000,000.

Foresees National Debt Of 45 Billions.

If adopted notwithstanding the huge increase in taxes, we will enter another era of rapidly mounting Federal deficits to be financed by the sale of Federal bonds. The consequences of another huge spending program pyramiding the public debt are so serious that the country should promptly take stock of the situation now existing. We must appraise the actual value of the colossal pump priming that has already occurred in spending borrowed money to create anything approaching a permanent prosperity or financial stability.

When the previous depression began our total Federal debt was $16,000,000,000. Our direct debt on July 1 next will be in excess of $38,000,000,000. To this must be added the contingent liabilities of the Federal Government resulting from guaranteeing obligations of 25 Government-owned corporations. This contingent liability is approximately $6,000,000,000, and the authorization for further issuance of such securities is not exhausted.

So, on the debit side of pump priming is:

(a) An increase in direct and contingent Federal indebtedness from $16,000,000,000 to a sum which may reach nearly $45,000,000,000 on July 1. The value of the assets of Government corporations has been greatly overestimated, as is evidenced by legislation recently enacted to write off $2,500,000,000 of nonrecoverable assets of the RFC. The fact remains that in a brief period the debts of the Federal Government have been increased nearly three times. To dissipate our resources so quickly is a reckless disregard for the most elementary principles of economics.

Public Fear Listed On the Debit Side.

(b) On the debit side of the vast spending program on borrowed money we must take into consideration the greatly increased indebtedness of States, counties and municipalities influenced by the example of the Federal Government or by Federal grants made contingent on expenditures by the subdivisions. The figures on such increases of the States and localities are not available, but such new debts are very large and directly attributable to the policies of the Federal Government.

(c) Again on the debit side must be listed the fear of every intelligent person that the repayment of this huge and increasing debt, with interest added, will place terrific burdens of taxation upon the American people which perhaps cannot be fully met by the taxation of incomes and of business activities. If we continue this wasteful spending in order to maintain the Federal solvency capital levies may become necessary, which means the confiscation of property and the destruction of our system of private ownership. This constantly mounting Federal debt and the unwillingness of the Administration to balance the budget has contributed greatly to the loss of confidence and to the fear of the future that is today the chief obstacle to business recovery. Our taxes are so burdensome now as to be the largest in our history not excepting the World War period. The Federal Government alone is exacting 10 cents out of every dollar of national income. The other governments are collecting 15 cents more, making a direct contribution of the American people to taxation of 25 per cent of our National income. And this terrific burden does not balance the budget. We are paying nothing on the Federal debt. In fact, we are issuing each year $1,000,000,000 in new bonds merely to pay the interest on the Federal debt.

(d) On the debt side, too, we can list the swollen bureaucracy that has been established to distribute $8,000,000,000 of Federal funds; a bureaucracy so wasteful and so powerfully entrenched that little short of a political revolution will be necessary to dismantle its vast operations and reduce expenditures to the ability of the people to pay.

(e) Again on the debit side of spending ourselves back to prosperity we must list tax-free bonds issued by the Federal Government and the subdivisions, totaling in all perhaps as much as $40,000,000,000, thus providing a refuge for the rich and well-to-do to invest in such securities and avoid the burdens of enormous taxation that fall upon the masses of the people.

What can be said on the credit side of spending vast sums in excess of our revenue for pump priming?

A transient and artificial prosperity was created for about three years. Although we have not reduced public spending, the stimulation has passed and we are in a business depression more rapid than has ever before been experienced and of the most serious magnitude. We face this condition of adversity handicapped with an enormously increased public debt. After five years of huge emergency spending the number of unemployed is as great as in 1933.

Are we to learn nothing from experience? Are we to embark again upon a policy that has been proved by actual trial to be not only ineffectual, but to create problems that will plague and harass the generations of Americans to come, and if continued much longer will end in bankruptcy and financial collapse? How long can the philosophy which the present Administration has preached—that prosperity and progress and contentment come from debt—be accepted as sound and wise by the American people? The experience of all the ages and the dictates of sound judgment tell us that what we spend we must pay. That is, if we are honest and intend to pay our debts and maintain our present system of democratic government.

It was President Roosevelt himself who said in October, 1932: "If in some crisis (the Government) lives beyond its income for a year or two, it can usually borrow temporarily on reasonable terms. But if, like a spendthrift, it throws discretion to the winds, is willing to make no sacrifice at all in spending, extends its taxation to the limit of the people's power to pay, and continues to pile up deficits, it is on the road to bankruptcy." The President was right, and what he then said forcibly demonstrates the situation that now confronts us today. Squandering ourselves back to prosperity has been a colossal failure, and, unless the American people awake and realize the peril of the situation, our Nation will be engulfed in a public debt so vast that even our potentialities and wealth cannot cope with the disastrous consequences.

Today there is much less justification for huge spending on borrowed money as a panacea for the depression than in 1933. It has been tried and it has failed. We have burdened ourselves with a public debt which will take generations to pay. In 1933 our current expenditures were $3,000,000,000. We have now established our spending on a basis of $8,000,000,000 without the new program now proposed. The belief is current that Federal spending has been reduced, and even such well-informed Senators as Senator Wagner, of New York, is quoted as saying: "We stopped spending too abruptly and now we have got to revive it." This is not the fact. For the year ending July 1, 1938, we will spend $800,000,000 more than in the previous fiscal year if we deduct the soldiers' bonus, and even though we do not make this deduction, we will still spend slightly more. In the next fiscal year of 1939, without the new program now proposed, we will spend as much or more than in the present fiscal year.

Remember we have never reduced the emergency spending. If we now increase our current expenditures the present base of $8,000,000,000 annually may go to $10,000,000,000 or more.

The erroneous impression as to reduced spending has been created by the deceit of the double-budget system whereby expenditures have been juggled from the regular budget to the emergency budget and back again, thus confusing the public mind. It is true that some reduction has been shown in the emergency budget but all and more of the reduction has been added to the regular budget. The people of America who must pay this tax bill are at least entitled to an honest system of bookkeeping. We have two budgets but only one pocketbook.

Our taxes now are so excessive and burdensome that we have reached the point of diminishing returns and even though we are forced ultimately to resort to a sales tax and the taxation of incomes in lower brackets, I regard it as impossible to produce enough revenue to balance the budget even at the present scale of spending and still maintain our business system. We are using the social security funds for current expenses. We have abolished the statutory debt retirement. The new spending program is superimposed upon the old. We have not reduced our emergency spending and this new proposal will simply add billions more to what we have already been spending. We have the most costly and wasteful bureaucracy in the history of any civilized nation. We continue to recklessly spend borrowed money with no effort to eliminate the waste and extravagance that now exist. What we need today is a restoration of confidence that the government of the people shall be operated along sound and sensible lines. I shall always vote to prevent any American from suffering the lack of the necessities of life. Continued increases in the public debt for pump-priming reduces our ability to provide for those in distress.

200 Americans Escape From Insurgent Trap

Remnants of 400 Caught at Gandesa Straggle to Own Lines.

By the Associated Press.

Mora La Nueva, Spain, April 9 (Delayed.)—Nine days have gone and they're still straggling through.

Two hundred of the 400 American fighting men who were surrounded by insurgents at Gandesa April 1 have reached their own lines.

These men of the Lincoln-Washington battalion swam rivers, slept in thickets, hid in trees, and ate whatever they could find in their 12-mile trek through enemy lines to this haven in government Spain.

The retreat of the international brigade began at Belchite when the foreign volunteers found themselves cut off by flanking insurgents.

They fought their way through to Gaspe, where the insurgent advance was held up for 48 hours in a bitter engagement.

Two Tell Story.

After but little sleep, the brigade moved back to Gandesa, where it was cut off again.

Here is the story told in a front-line hospital by Buck Troyer, of Tulsa, Okla., and James Corbin, of Seattle, Wash., gaunt, bearded machine-gunners:

"A couple of hundred of us were marching out from Gandesa when the Fascist (insurgent) cavalry attacked us.

"We machine-gunners—five of us—circled out. This was one time we really did have the order to wait for the whites of their eyes.

"We practically counted their buttons before we started shooting. Then we got the order to scatter."

Waved to Foes.

The two men stayed together during the long journey through insurgent territory.

"We had a couple of days and nights of steady walking and fighting and just went to sleep," their story continued.

"In the daylight the next morning we started walking. We waved to the Fascist patrols and watched their ambulances and cars going past. We stopped to cut lettuce and beans and drink water.

"Why didn't they know we weren't Fascists? Well their uniforms look about like ours."

One Drowned in River.

Mud and trench stains almost hid the color of the Khaki cotton breeches the two men wore.

"We saw patrols of cavalry and we hid in the hills. While we were hiding, a stone hit us. We looked around. It was six more of our boys so we joined up together.

"Of course, with eight of us, we had to be more careful. Before that, it was just like walking through the country. It was really funny.

"Finally we got to the river and took off our clothes and swam for Sarria."

One of the group, the two men said, was drowned. They gave his name as Robert Pettijohn of Seattle, Wash. The others, who arrived safely despite sniping from insurgent lines, were: Mike Pappas, Thomas O'Flaherty, Jack Hoschule, Norman Pearlman and Larry Lustgarten, all of New York City.

Militiamen defending the Vinaroz-Tortosa link between Catalonia nad the rest of government Spain seemed unable to hold out much longer against the superior equipment which Franco threw into his eastward smash toward the sea.

Lerida Front Quiet.

3. The Lerida Province front, comparatively dormant since the fall of the city of Lerida, 80 miles west of Barcelona, and the subsequent capitulation of Balaguer, part of the government's emergency defense line east of Lerida.

[The United Press reported that Gen. Jose Moscardo's Nationalist Navarrese columns tonight crossed the Segre River, east of Balaguer, and cut the main highways leading to France and Barcelona.

[The simultaneous cutting of the main roads enabled the Nationalists to thrust deeper into Loyalist territory, putting them only 67 miles from the Government's provisional capital, at Barcelona, and in position for encircling operations against Loyalist troops behind Lerida and Balaguer.—Editor's note.]

4. Insurgent operations based on Tremp, 40 miles north of Lerida, having as their objective the capture of Seo de Urgel and Puigcerda, frontier cities. The ultimate objective of these operations was to thrust an insurgent salient to the upper Catalonian coast, parelleling the French border, to cut government Spain off from France.

The whole Segre River valley south of Seo de Urgel was reported evacuated on government orders, the refugees destroying or carrying away property that might be of use to the insurgents.

Vatican Celebrates Entrance of Christ

Vatican City, April 10 (AP).—Christ's triumphal entry into Jerusalem was commemorated with Palm Sunday ceremonies today in the capital of Catholicism.

At St. Peter's, Mgr. Luigi Campa, one of the Vatican canons, celebrated high mass and was the principal figure in the traditional procession of the palms.

Pope Pius, sparing his strength for the ceremonies of Holy Thursday, Good Friday and Easter Sunday, said mass quietly in his private chapel.

Germans and Austria Vote For Union by 99.75 Per Cent

Austria

Reichstag) of our Fuehrer, Adolf Hitler?"

For all Germany and Austria there were 452,180 "No" votes, a percentage of 0.9173. More than 75,000 votes were thrown out as invalid.

Josef Buerckel, Nazi leader of the plebiscite in Austria, went on the air to report the polling result to Hitler by radio.

"Der Fuehrer," he said, "it is my satisfaction to report to you the peoples' answer which is an annihilating verdict against those who thought they could enslave a people by treaties.

"This vote proves we Germans belong for eternity only to Germany and der Fuehrer."

Hitler, from his office in the Berlin chancellery, replied in a voice husky from the strain of his six-day plebiscite speaking tour through Austria.

May Change Name.

"The results in Austria as well as in the rest of the Reich surpass all my expectations.

"I am unspeakably happy at Austria's declaration of the true feelings and expression of confidence.

"This is the proudest hour of my life and I can do nothing but thank, from the depths of my heart, the entire German people, and particularly those of my own Austrian homeland."

As Hitler spoke reports spread that Austria might soon cease to exist geographically and become—under the "mandate" of the plebiscite—the German province of Ostmark, or "Eastern March."

Every bit of pressure had been applied, both in Austria and Germany, during the last three weeks to mobilize a vote exceeding the 99.8 per cent vote of approval that followed Hitler's reoccupation of the Rhineland on March 7, 1936.

There was no escape from voting—except for Austria's Jews, who were disfranchised by Hitler and who remained indoors during "the day of the greater German Reich."

They feared to venture out into the streets where Nazis in uniforms ranged up and down, stopping men and women at random to see whether they wore the small "Ja" button proclaiming that they had voted "Yes."

House-to-House Canvass.

Taxicabs were commandeered by special decree to rush voters to the polls. Ambulances with big swastikas painted on them moved through festooned streets carrying the aged and infirm.

Storm troopers with "official" cars went from house to house, with the thoroughness of an American precinct captain and his workers on election day, checking up to make certain that every qualified voter had cast his ballot.

The only thing lacking to make it an Austrian carnival day was liquor. There were brass bands and street corner speakers, but the sale of beer and spirits was prohibited during voting hours.

The more ardent Nazis had hoped that there would not be a single negative vote against Der Fuehrer but early returns listed such results as "yes, 994; no, 1."

Some observers wondered whether there actually had been negative votes; whether they might not have been listed to give evidence of a free and secret ballot.

Those who voted "yes" cast their lot with Hitler who told a Vienna audience of 18,000 Saturday night that his "burning faith" had restored Germany from ruins to a proud and great nation.

Speakers echoed the appeal of Austrian pride from every street corner today.

Jews Pray at Home.

Beyond the extended borders of the new Germany, in Czechoslovakia, France and Britain, statesmen wondered whether the overwhelming vote of confidence might encourage Hitler to make another early move in extension of his power.

Pious Jewish families gathered around Sabbath candles pondering the fate of their nation and praying to Jehovah for mercy. They, like other opponents of the Nazi regime, feared the Nazis might start a campaign for suppression of "anti-German" elements after the plebiscite sanction of "anschluss."

In order to assure a complete turnout at Vienna's 18,000 polling places all other Sunday attractions were canceled.

A commission watched the balloting at each poll.

The procedure was simple. The voter received his ballot with "yes" above a large circle and "no" above a small circle after handing over his identification card to the inspector in charge who checked the name with his lists.

Miklas Votes Early.

After completing his vote the voter received a lapel button.

Former President Wilhelm Miklas, spared from arrest when Hitler seized Austria, but still under "protective" guard, was among the first voters.

At 7:30 a. m. he went to a school building near his palace.

Stony-faced and pale, the white-haired Miklas wore no emblem such as other Austrians and when he offered to produce his identification papers an official said:

"That's unnecessary. We know you."

Cardinal Innitzer Cheered.

There was a burst of lusty cheering at a school house voting place when Theodore Cardinal Innitzer, Catholic Archbishop of Vienna, arrived to vote. His appeal to Austria's 6,000,000 Catholics to vote "yes" had involved him in difficulties with the Vatican.

In addition to hailing Hitler as the Fuerher of the greater German Reich, today's plebiscite returned a new Reichstag of some 800 deputies, in which Austrian delegates will sit with their German conferees for the first time since 1848.

But little heed was paid to this result of the vote. All stress was on the vote of acclaim for Hitler.

Gay Vote in Channel.

Tilbury, England, April 10 (AP).—A gay, beer-drinking crowd of Germans and Austrians aboard the German steamer Wilhelm Gustloff today voted 1,968 to 10 in favor of Austro-German union. The vote was cast in the English Channel by German and Austrian nationals living in England.

4,200 in Italy.

Rome, April 10 (U.P.).—Princess Mafalda, second daughter of the King of Italy and wife of Prince Philip of Hesse, nephew of the former German Kaiser, was among German citizens in Italy to vote in the German-Austrian plebiscite today. The princess and some 4,200 other Germans voted aboard the German Cruiser Admiral Scheer. Voting was extended over tomorrow.

One Killed in Argentina.

Buenos Aires, April 10 (AP).—One anti-Nazi demonstrator was killed and several others injured today when police dispersed a demonstration staged in protest against an Austro-German plebiscite mass meeting attended by more than 8,000 German and Austrian residents of Argentina.

In Far East.

Hongkong, April 10 (AP).—Germans and Austrians from Canton and Hongkong today voted approval of Austro-German union, casting their ballots aboard the German steamer Friderun anchored in Hongkong Harbor.

Britain, Italy Agree On 'Peace' Details

Rome, April 10 (U.P.).—Final details of the proposed Anglo-Italian "peace" agreement were settled tonight. A committee will begin drafting the text tomorrow.

British Ambassador Lord Perth and Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano cleared up details of British recognition of Italy's annexation of Ethiopia, belligerency rights for the Spanish rebels, reduction of Italian forces in Libya and Italian troop withdrawals from Spain.

All But 1 in Cabinet Quits.

Guayaquil, Ecuador, April 10 (U.P.). The entire cabinet, with the exception of the minister of the interior, resigned today.

American Tells Of Humiliating JapaneseDefeat

Japan

toward the front when we re-entered Taierhchwang Friday.

As this dispatch was filed, however, fresh divisions of Chinese still were passing through this ruined walled city toward the front where, Gen. Li said, the Japanese still were in retreat and suffering heavy losses.

Despite the fact all the villages in the Taierhchwang sector were devastated in the long battle which preceded Chinese capture of the region, civilians were returning to them tonight and preparing to rebuild their homes.

Gen. Li said one of his columns had surrounded Yihsien where a large Japanese force was barricaded inside the walled city.

"Our artillery is bombarding Yihsien preparatory to a general attack," the Chinese commander said.

This correspondent stood on a pontoon bridge across the Grand Canal, near Taierhchwang, and saw thousands of jubilant Chinese infantrymen hurrying northward. They were the best armed and equipped of any of the provincial forces seen in all the Lunghai line, which defends Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's provisional capital in Hankow.

Invaders Overconfident.

The cause of the Japanese defeat in this area unquestionably was overconfidence.

The Japanese fought their way into this series of railway triangles north of Suchow, where the fortified east-west Lunghai line crosses the north-south Tientsin-Pukow line, last month, and, in their usual fashion, dug in to live off the country.

They apparently maintained no regular communication lines, because of their comparatively small numbers, depending on their armored cars to escort their supply trucks to and fro between their scattered bases.

These cars were put out of action a fortnight ago when Chinese guerrilla bands systematically destroyed scores of bridges and culverts and dug great "tank traps' across roads and fields.

Gen. Li then sent a series of columns into a fan-shaped counter-attack and surrounded the Japanese after splitting them into comparatively small groups. The result was an unprecedented Chinese victory.

Hongkong Bomb Kills 100.

Hongkong, April 10 (AP).—More than 100 persons, including many girl workers, were believed killed today when a Japanese aerial bomb crashed into a weaving plant in a congested district of western Canton. Many were injured.

Four Japanese planes roared over the city in the afternoon, bombing military objectives on the outskirts. Only one bomb landed in the city proper.

It struck the weaving plant which had been converted from a theater. That building and several surrounding factories and houses were shattered. Flames quickly broke out in the debris.

The only foreign eyewitness found was John H. Barrows, of Rockham, S. Dak., radio operator on the United States river gunboat Mindanao. He said he counted 80 bodies and saw 4 Chinese women burned alive when trapped under a fallen wall.

Reinforcements Pour In.

Shanghai, April 10 (AP).—Heavy Japanese reinforcements poured into Shantung Province from North China and Tsingtao, the Shantung seaport, tonight to prevent a threatened isolation of Tokyo's legions along the Tientsin-Pukow Railway.

Japanese, strung out along the North-South Railway all the way from Yishien, 135 miles north of Tsinan, Shantung provincial capital, were fighting off Chinese flank attacks after last week's turning of the tide at Taierhchwang.

Hitler and Aides Happily Watch as Votes Are Piled Up

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 10.—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler was greater Germany's happiest man tonight as Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels handed him plebsicite return after return in the chancellery.

Assembled about him were the men whom he fought in closest comradeship for the triumph of naziism.

They included leaders like Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, No. 2 Nazi; Rudolf Hess, Hitler's general representative, and Walter Darre, commissar for control of prices.

Goebbels sat at a private telephone wire over which the returns in the polling on Austro-German union were communicated as fast as they became available.

Often he had difficulty in hearing the voice at the other end, because, outside the chancellery on the vast Wilhelmplatz, thousands of Berlin residents stood by the hour, shouting:

"We want to see our Fuehrer!"

Finally, at 7:30 p. m., and at intervals thereafter, Hitler appeared on the balcony.

Floodlights shone in his face, which was wreathed with happy smiles. His hand was raised in the Nazi salute.

Beside him stood Goering and Goebbels.

The eager crowd broke through the cordon of police and surged forward until they stood directly under the balcony and shouted until they were hoarse.

Hitler apparently was amused greatly by seeing a brown-shirted S. A. man carrying a caricature of a sad figure labeled:

"The last nein (no) voter of April 10."

During intervals between the Fuehrer's appearances, the crowd amused itself by singing national hyms, listening to broadcast election results and crying "pfu" whenever negative votes were recorded.

aid to the Spanish government in its war against the insurgents.

The Socialist Party still is numerically the strongest in the Chamber of Deputies and it constituted the greatest threat to Daladier's ministry.

The husky new premier broadcast an appeal for patriotic union of Frenchmen only a few hours after he presented his cabinet to the President.

Daladier's Appeal.

"The grave difficulties which have grown inside our country and those which threaten to become even more serious on our frontiers, if France does not resolve to remain free and strong," he declared, "forced me to take the responsibilities of government to do duty as a republican Frenchman."

He said the people had shown confidence in his work in the defense ministry by supporting defense loans but, he declared:

"Now the problem is national defense more than military organization."

"At present," he added, "everything which concerns the life of our country, all political, social, economic and financial problems, is tied to the question of security and bound to the question of safeguarding peace.

"There is only one problem today—the safety of the nation."

Asking the country to aid him, he pleaded: "I appeal to all Frenchmen for voluntary discipline and labor."

Some deputies indicated he might shake up his cabinet later to take in representatives of other parties, depending on what support he receives in Parliament when he presents his government there, probably Thursday.

He began to work immediately to prepare Parliament to receive his demand for decree powers over financial and economic matters for a period of six months.

In the chamber, Socialist deputies still are bitter over the Senate refusal to give Blum the same decree powers.

Daladier's friends feared they might try to wreck the new government.

70,000 on Strike.

Meanwhile, Daladier's main problems include the task of finding money for the treasury and the vast rearmament program, the ending of the growing strike movement and the strengthening of the nation's foreign alliances in the face of the greater Germany.

[It was announced that France's wave of sit-down strikes had spread to 38 factories in the Paris region and involved close to 70,000 workers, the United Press reported.

[The production of airplane parts and motors for the war ministry was paralyzed. Other key industries rapidly neared stagnation at the hands of the strikers.—Editor's note.]

Daladier's determination to remain in control of the armed forces was shown by the fact that the defense portfolio, controlling the army, the navy and the air forces, remained in his hands in addition to the war portfolio controlling the land forces directly.

Daladier's Cabinet.

The cabinet list follows:

Premier and minister of national defense and war, Edouard Daladier; vice premier and interministerial coordination, Camille Chautemps; justice, Paul Reynaud; foreign affairs, George Bonnet; interior, Albert Sarraut; finance, Paul Marchandeau; air, Guy la Chambre; navy, Cesar Campinchi; education, Jean Zay; colonies, Georges Mandel; agriculture, Henri Queuille; commerce, Pierre Gentin; public works, Louis Oscar Frossard; merchant marine, Louis de Chappedelaine; pensions, Auguste Champetier de Ribes; national economy and production, Raymond Patenotre; public health, Marc Rucart; labor, Paul Ramadier; posts, telegraphs and telephones, Jules Julien.

All are members of the Chamber of Deputies except Senators Champetier de Ribes, Chautemps, Sarraut and Queuille.

There are no undersecretaries. The last government included 23 ministers and 12 undersecretaries.

U. S. Fighting Unit Wears Swastika, But Unlike Nazis'

The Forty-fifth Division, Western National Guard fighting unit, may wear its swastika emblem without blushing, War Department experts discovered yesterday.

Inspired by the complaint of Adjt. Gen. Alphonse P. Ardourel, of the National Guard outfit, the War Department's search uncovered the fact that Hitler's swastika is tilted whereas the insignia of the Forty-fifth rests squarely on its base. Furthermore there are 700 such devices in use.

The Forty-fifth Division is composed of troops from Colorado, Oklahoma, Nevada and New Mexico. It borrowed the swastika in 1925 from the Indians and from the coat of arms of Francisco Vasques Coronado, who was a pretty good dictator in his day.

125 Liberals Sign Petition Favoring Refugee Program

New York, April 10 (AP).—An appeal signed by 125 liberals, urging "hold-out" nations to join President Roosevelt's plan to provide haven for refugees, was issued today by A. Alan Lane, chairman of the American Committee for Protection of Minorities.

The manifesto was designed chiefly for foreign countries which have not yet accepted Secretary Hull's invitation of March 24 to participate in the program.

Among the signers listed were William Green, president of the A. F. of L., the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, Bishop Thomas Jenkins of Nevada, Brock Pemberton, the producer; Herbert Bayard Swope, Samuel Untermyer and Chief Justice John S. Dawson of the Kansas Supreme Court.

Poland Joins Line Seeking Colonies

Warsaw, Poland, April 10 (AP).—Poland appealed for colonies today in nation-wide demonstrations and lectures sponsored by the Naval and Colonial League, an organization of 750,000 persons which has campaigned 16 years in that cause.

The leader of the leagued termed Poland a "typical have-not" nation and said the desire for colonies grew out of the problem of overpopulation on Poland's farms.

Air Service Set To Europe in July

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 10.—Regular transatlantic passenger and mail service, on a 24-hour schedule between New York and Foynes, Ireland, will start late in July or early in August, Federal officials announced today.

The flights, 11 years after Lindbergh's pioneering solo hop, will be operated by Pan-American Airways and Imperial Airways.

London, April 10 (AP).—Imperial Airways officials said tonight inauguration of transatlantic air service this summer would be impossible because of a lack of equipment.

Sheik of Araby Leads Wedding Caravan of Son

Escorts Bride-to-Be in Procession Riding Over Hills to Biskra.

By the Associated Press.

Algiers, Algeria, April 10.—A luxury caravan, escorted by Arabian noblemen on fiery steeds, today wound its way over mountain roads toward Biskra, where tomorrow the shiek of Araby's favorite son will be wed.

In the colorful 30-car procession were Si el Hadj Bou Aziz Ben Gana, titular sheik of all the Arabs; Si Mohammed Ben Gana, 23, his son and heir to the title, and the bride-to-be, beautiful 22-year-old Douja Ben Smaia, daughter of an Algiers college professor.

The escorting noblemen, garbed in richly colored ceremonial robes, fired shots into the air to express joy over the wedding. It will be celebrated at the sheik's Biskra Palace in accordance with Moslem rites.

All along the 175-mile route tribesmen flocked to the roadside to greet the wedding party and to offer presents.

The sheik, who traces his lineage back to Mohammed, personally escorted his prospective daughter-in-law in strict accordance with custom. The bridegroom rode in another car.

Mlle. Douja Ben Smaia, contrary to all Arab customs, left her face uncovered, although she said she would adhere to Mohammedan rules at Biskra.

"But my European friends will always be welcome visitors," she said. "And when I come to Algiers on a visit, I'll put on my European clothes and drop in to see them. Both of our civilizations have their charm."

12 Hurt in Tunis As French Seize Another Sheik

By the Associated Press.

Tunis, Tunisia, April 10.—A column of Nationalist natives marching on Tunis clashed with troops today and a dozen or more were wounded.

The Arabs had set out from Grombalia, about 19 miles east of this French-governed capital, to demand the release of the Neodestour (Nationalist) leader, Ali Belhuane.

Rioting yesterday, which led to a state of siege, killed 15 persons and injured 80. The disorder followed a proclamation by Nationalists that they would seize civil and military prisons unless their chieftain were freed.

Mobile Guards Rushed.

Mobile guard detachments were rushed from several outlying points. There was no rioting today but the Arab quarter seethed with excitement and authorities feared a fresh outbreak.

French military authorities were in complete charge of the city through the proclamation of siege by the Bey, Sidi Ahmed.

The authorities, defying the Arab demands, seized another Neodestour leader, Abib Bourguiba.

Meanwhile in Algiers, French-governed North African city, stevedores struck for wage increases and refused to unload ships.

(Algiers is the capital of Algeria, a French possession, while adjacent Tunisia is a French protectorate.)

Sixty persons were arrested in Tunis on charges of carrying arms and firing at police and 13 agitators were taken into custody during the night.

Truccos Give Luncheon; Miss Tudela Holds Tea

Olga Patterson and the Ernest Schlatters Are Guests of Honor as Date of Their Departure for Brussels Nears; Many Diplomats Are Present.

By Elizabeth Ford.

From the first course at the luncheon given yesterday by the Señoritas Marta and Rebecca Trucco, daughters of the Chilean Ambassador, down to the last olive in the last glass at Miss Fina Tudela's "tea" in the late afternoon for the popular Ernest Schlatters, society toiled not, but indeed it spun.

Mme. Schlatter's sister, Miss Olga Patterson, who will accompany the retiring Swiss attache and his wife when they sail in the near future for Brussels, was the guest of honor at the function given by the Truccos.

Sacasas Attend Trucco Luncheon

Others present in addition to the Ambassador, his two daughters and his son, Manuel Trucco, were the Minister of Bolivia and Senora de Guachalla; the former President of Panama, Ricardo J. Alfaro and Senora de Alfaro; Senora de Sacasa, wife of the former President of Nicaragua, and her two daughters, the Senoritas Maruca and Gloria Sacasa (who are house guests of the Alfaros); Roberto Sacasa and Dr. Fernando Sacasa.

Other guests included Ernest Schlatter and Mme. Schlatter; Joao de Deus Ramos, Secretary of the Portuguese Legation; Gerard Walravens, Second Secretary of the Belgian Embassy, and Jose Maria de Lasa, Attache of the Cuban Embassy.

* * * *

At Miss Tudela's afternoon function were, besides, the guests of honor and Miss Olga Patterson, Miss Stellita Stapleton, the First Secretary of the Chilean Embassy, Sergio Huneeus; Mr. Walravens; the Minister of Bolivia and Senora de Guachalla; Victor Sutro; Michal Budny, Attache of the Polish Embassy, and a large contingent from the Argentine Embassy.

* * * *

Other tea and tidbit parties yesterday included that given by Representative Edith Nourse Rogers for Republican members and their wives in both the House and Senate. Decorations followed tradition (that is, they were spring flowers), with their color scheme being yellow and white. Representative Rogers, who wore a print afternoon dress, repeating the yellow and white motif in its design, informally chose those who assisted her from her guests as they arrived.

Also on the books was the tea at which Mrs. Emerson Howe was hostess at her apartment on Connecticut avenue. Among her guests were Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. William H. King, Mrs. Ralph Brewster, Mrs. Ralph Church, Mrs. Charles Edward Riggs, wife of Rear Admiral Riggs, and Miss Elizabeth Howry.

Mme. Orlicz-Dreszer Is Feted at Supper

Later in the evening, Mrs. Elizabeth B. Canada entertained at her apartment at the Shoreham in honor of Mme. Orlicz-Dreszer, who will return to Poland early in May. Covers were laid for 30.

Among the many guests were Mr. and Mrs. Abner Drury, Col. Joseph C. Fegan, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Fegan, Mrs. James McKane, Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Smith, Mr. and Mrs. J. Clinton Tribby, Miss Cornelia Bowie and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Whitman.

Also Dr. Vladimir Rybar, Counselor of the Yugoslavian Legation; Mr. and Mrs. George Bean, Clyde Brown and Samuel Duval.

Delta Gamma Alumnae Meet at Mrs. Bradley's

The Washington Alumnae of Delta Gamma will hold their April meeting tomorrow at the home of Mrs. Philip Bradley, of 5608 Edgemoor lane, Bethesda, at 8:30. The assistant hostesses are: Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Mrs. Louis C. West, Mrs. Isaac R. Hitt, Mrs. Northcutt Ely, Mrs. Julian Conover, Mrs. Rachel Nyswander, Mrs. Raleigh Dawson, Miss Hazel Kirk, Mrs. Margaret Nicholson and Mrs. Vernon Stoutemyer.

There will be reports of committees including one appointed to draw up bylaws, with Miss Edith Rockwood as chairman, and Miss Janet Brown and Miss Kathryn Heath as assistants.

Harold Kellys To Make Home At Philadelphia

Now on their wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Harold L. Kelly, jr., will make their home in Philadelphia, Pa. Mrs. Kelly is the former Miss Margaret Alma Jordan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell H. Jordan, of Washington, while Mr Kelly is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold L. Kelly, of Forest Glenn. Their marriage took place Saturday evening at 9 o'clock in the Silver Spring Baptist Church with the Rev. J. W. Loftis officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white lace gown over white satin. Her tulle veil was held by a coronet of seed pearls and she carried a bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Ruth Nusbaum, of Takoma Park, was maid of honor, while Mrs. Harry Mason, of Washington, served as bridesmaid. Both were gowned in peach taffeta and lace. They wore bands of peach colored rosebuds in their hair and carried talisman roses. Frances Jordan, younger sister of the bride, who was a junior bridesmaid, was in yellow organdy over taffeta. Her bouquet was of yellow roses and she wore rosebuds of the same shade in her hair. The flower girl was Charlene Kreh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kreh, of Silver Spring. Stuart Walter Harrison, jr., small son of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Walter Harrison, of Richmond, Va., was the ringbearer.

Harry Mason served as best man, while the ushers were William McClellan, the Rev. Edward Tull and Harwood Jordan, brother of the bride.

A reception followed the wedding and took place at the home of the bride's parents.

When the couple left for their trip, Mrs. Kelly was wearing a suit of dark blue gabardine with accessories to match.

First Lady Guest At Arlington Tea

Mrs. Roosevelt will be guest of honor Wednesday at the tea to be given by the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County, in celebration of the fifteenth anniversary of the group. The occasion will be the second on which the First Lady has been present at the meeting of an Arlington County society. The other was the program given last spring by the Instructive Visiting Nurses Association.

The Women Voters will entertain from 4:30 to 6 o'clock at the Washington Golf and Country Club and expect more than 300 guests. The organization is unaffiliated with any other and pursues a nonpartisan study of political issues and public affairs much as does the League of Women Voters. Mrs. Julian D. Simpson is its president.

Club to Hear Arnold.

Dr. Thurman Arnold, newly appointed assistant to the Attorney General and author of "The Folklore of Capitalism," will be guest speaker at the regular luncheon meeting of the Women's National Press Club tomorrow at the Willard Hotel.

Soon to Visit in Washington

Hessler Studio.

Miss Grace George Koehler, daughter of Lieut. Col. George R. Koehler, of Kansas City, Kans., will arrive in Washington the middle of this week to be the guest of Mrs. A. J. Anderson at her apartment in the Argonne.

Leahys Sponsor Ballet Program

Admiral and Mrs. William D. Leahy will be among sponsors for a reception the evening of May 2 to be given by Miss Lisa Gardiner, director of the Washington National Ballet. The reception and ballet program will take place at 9 o'clock at the King-Smith Playhouse with many popular Washington girls participating in the dances.

Other patrons and patronesses include Commander and Mrs. Atherton Macondray, Col. and Mrs. Robert S. Thomas, Judge and Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gregor.

Also Mrs. Howard Davidson, Mrs. J. H. Magruder, Mrs. Ben S. Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. August King-Smith, Miss Cecil Lester Jones, Miss Grace Fox and Lewis Lofton Moneyway, president of the Arts Club.

* * * *

The Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close have issued cards for a reception the afternoon of April 21 from 5 to 7 o'clock.

Guests will be members of the Washington Branch of the English Speaking Union.

District Polish Clubs To Meet Wednesday

The Polish Club of Washington and Group 848, Polish National Alliance, will hold their regular monthly meeting, Wednesday at Stansbury Hall, 5832 Georgia avenue northwest, at 8 p. m.

Among matters to be taken up are final preparations for the Polish Constitution Day banquet May 3, which will be held in the Wardman Park Hotel. Another event to be discussed is the banquet which the Gen. Krzyzanowski committee will hold in the same hotel May 13, following unveiling of the monument to Gen. Wladimir Krzyzanowski at Arlington Cemetery.

Issues of the Chronicle, official club organ, will be ready for distribution at this meeting.

Miss Briggs Holds Tea in Honor of Guest, Mrs. Wylly

Miss Minnie L. Briggs, etcher, entertained at tea yesterday afternoon in honor of Mrs. A. Campbell Wylly, who is her house guest. She is on her way from her home in Sea Island, Ga., to Stamford, Conn., where she will open her summer residence.

Among the guests were Comdr. and Mrs. Robert Moulton, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Browning, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Gallagher, Mrs. Florence Rice, Miss Hester McNally and Dr. and Mrs. Blaine Moore.

Also Miss Marion Defoe, Dr. and Mrs. Elic Priest, Miss Mary Virginia Lackey, Dr. Gardner Shoemaker, Miss Mary-Lou Rawley, and Mrs. Theodore Tiller.

Service Is Held For Curley Club

Curley Club members and their friends attended the services in the Immaculate Conception Church yesterday afternoon at 5:15 o'clock, meeting at the school hall, next to the church, at 5 o'clock to go to the church in a body.

Next Sunday afternoon Miss Dorothy E. Barrett, president of the club, and her mother, Mrs. Annie Barrett, will be hostesses to members of the club and their friends at a silver tea in the Thomas Circle Club, 1326 Massachusetts avenue northwest, from 3:30 to 6 o'clock.

Mrs. Barrett will be assisted at the tea table by Mrs. Baden, Mrs. Blancke, Mrs. McKay, Mrs. Bayer, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Bazzuro, Mrs. Connelly, Mrs. Bowers, Mrs. Poore and Mrs. Hoffman. Several of the young ladies of the club will help Miss Barrett in entertaining.

A short musical program will be presented during the afternoon.

The next regular meeting of the club will be held Tuesday, April 19, in the Continental Hotel at 8:15 p. m.

Capital Women To Lead Parley

The unpartisan National League of Women Voters has chosen Charles E. Merriam, adviser to Presidents, both Republican and Democrat, to begin and end its biennial convention forum on the American system of government, its principles and its prejudices.

Three "Behind the Issues" symposia on this subject, dealing with the forum, scope and nature of government in the United States, will be featured at the league convention at St. Louis, Mo., April 25 to 29.

Mr. Merriam, professor of political science at the University of Chicago, will conduct the first symposium and summarize all three at the end of the banquet session. Miss Marguerite M. Wells, president of the league, has announced:

Mrs. Eugene Meyer will be one of the speakers on the program, discussing the cultural aspects of a democracy.

Dr. Herman Finer, connected since 1920 with the London School of Economics and Political Science, University of London, and at present resident in Knoxville, Tenn., engaged in a year's study at the invitation of the Social Science Research Council, will address the banquet session of the convention. His subject will be the democratic versus the Fascist idea of government. From 1924 to the present, Dr. Finer has made four lengthy visits to the United States for study of its government and economic system. He is author of "Mussolini's Italy," written after a year's residence in that country.

John M. Gaus, of the Social Science Research Council, will have as his subject "Checks and Balances," a broad inquiry into relations between executive and legislative branches. Besides being an author of note on governmental subjects, Mr. Gaus taught successively at Amherst College, Smith College Summer school of Social Work, the University of Minnesota, the University of Chicago and, since 1827, at the University of Wisconsin.

Robert Cushman, professor of government at Cornell University and contributor to law reviews, will discuss the power of judicial reviews in the American system.

The program of the National Convention will include 15 "little dinners" designed for sociability and intimate group discussion of legal work. Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, chairman of the District Voteless League of Women Voters, has been chosen as a leader of one of the dinner conferences.

The subject will be consideration of the ways in which league meetings can promote the league program of work; the local organization's unemployment relief survey under the Department of Government and Ecoomic Welfare, of which Mrs. David Cushman Coyle is chairman; the work of the Department of Government and Education under Mrs. Willa Savin; Government and Child Welfare, under Mrs. Gordon Wagenet, and Government and Its Operation, under Mrs. Charles Weston.

Mrs. Weston and Mrs. Wagenet, with Mrs. Ottenberg, and delegates to the convention from Washington and Mrs. C. A. Hodge, vice chairman of child welfare, and, Mrs. Elwood Street, former member of the national board, will go as alternates.

Jewish Women's Council Will Meet Tomorrow

Mrs. Harry Levinson, chairman of religious schools, will deliver the opening prayer at the regular monthly meeting of the Washington Section Council of Jewish Women, to be held at the Jewish Community Center. Tomorrow at 2:15 p. m. The children of the religious schools will appear in a Purim play, and Mrs. Joel David Wolfsohn will give a book review on Sholem Asch's best-seller, "Mother."

This will be followed by a social and tea with Mrs. Adolph Kretchel as hostess.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

IN CERTAIN circles throughout the land, mention of the name "Kennedy" is being received with practically no enthusiasm. At least one young Washingtonian has cause for chagrin since the Ambassador to England clamped down on American presentations to the Court of Sinjims. Miss Caroline Cecil, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Joseph Cecil, had hoped to be one of the lucky few to curtsy before the King and Queen this summer, and plans were going ahead nicely when suddenly comes the news that our envoy doesn't believe it's democratic to have to pick and choose from hundreds of eager applicants.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Miss Cecil, who is tall, dark and handsome was presented to Capital society early in the winter at a tea given in her parents' apartment and later at a dance at the Sulgrave Club.

* * * *

HOWEVER, there is a sizable group of Washingtonians who were luckier than Miss Cecil. Last summer two from here were presented to royalty: Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, and Miss Frances Andrews, daughter of Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, recently named chief of the scouting fleet, and Mrs. Andrews. They were unusually fortunate, for not only was there all the fuss and feathers of the court ceremony, but they also came in for all the festivities attendant upon the coronation.

Miss Stellita Stapleton, who also had a ringside seat at last May's pomp and circumstance, was presented at the English court shortly after she made her debut a few years ago. She and her mother, Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton, spend almost every summer in the British Isles, where everybody they know seems to have a handle to his name.

* * * *

MRS. GEORGE BARNETT, cousin of the Duchess of Windsor, and Miss Emlen Knight Davies, whose father is Joseph Davies, Ambassador to Brussels, are others who got in their presentations at court before it was too late.

Those who see slipping away their dreams of curtsying in brocade and feathers to royalty, the height of ambition for so many American women, are rather put out, to say it mildly.

* * * *

WE HAVE been asked to announce here that Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins has received the sad news of the sudden death yesterday of her father in Buenos Aires, and has canceled all social engagements.

* * * *

It looks as though Washington would get a lot of vicarious fun out of the coming World's Fair in New York. Nearly all the foreign countries are sending representatives to take charge of their exhibits, and many of these people are coming to the Capital to pay their respects to the embassies and legations.

Sabry Pasha, uncle of King Farouk of Egypt is already here and will be honored at a men's dinner to be given on Wednesday by the First Secretary of Legation and Charge d'Affaires, Husseid Mahmoud Rady. Later in the week the Italian delegate to the fair, Admiral Cantu, a retired naval officer, will arrive in Washington to visit Ambassador Fulvio Suvich. The Naval Attache of the Embassy, the Marquis of Sant Orsola, expects to go to New York to meet him.

The Suviches, incidentally, will probably go South again for Easter shortly after their return Wednesday from a stay in New Orleans. The Air and Military Attache and Signora Coppola will spend the holiday skiing in Canada.

* * * *

INSPIRED by that rather short-lived organization, the "Veterans of Future Wars," a number of people taking volunteer courses in Red Cross Work have christened themselves "Heroines of Future Disasters." Among those who have signed up for the courses (not all are members of H. F. D.) are Miss Mary Winifred Brown, Mrs. Chauncey Parker, jr., Mrs. Austin Sullivan, Mrs. John Wilson, Mrs. William Laird Dunlop 3d, Miss Polly Wirgeman, Mrs. Frederick Warren, who is the daughter of Secretary Marvin MacIntyre, Miss Margaret Austin and Miss Barbara Bolling.

Hygiene Society Fete Tomorrow

Honoring their fellow officers and board members, many representative welfare, health, and civic leaders have reserved tables for the twentieth dinner meeting of the Social Hygiene Society of the District of Columbia at Barker Hall tomorrow. Miss Rhoda Milliken, chairman of the dinner committee, announces that Senator Robert M. La Follette and Dr. Arthur T. McCormack will speak.

Among those who have made reservations are: Justice and Mrs. Jesse C. Adkins, Judge Fay L. Bentley, Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Street, Dr. and Mrs. George C. Ruhland, Assistant Surgeon General R. A. Vonderlehr, U. S. Public Health Service; Dr. and Mrs. Henry H. Hazen, Dr. and Mrs. Russell J. Fields, Mrs. R. Thomas West, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice D. Rosenberg, Maj. Gen. Merritte W. Ireland, retired surgeon general; Dr. and Mrs. Daniel L. Seckinger, Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Ufford, Dr. Edith SeVille Coale, Dr. Louise Taylor-Jones, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Wheeler; Dr. Elizabeth Kittredge, Mrs. Laura H. Martin; Miss Gertrude Bowling, Dr. William P. Herbst, Dr. F. J. Eichenlaub, and Miss Virginia Christie.

Also Mrs. Theresa McGee, Miss Christine E. Robb, Isaac Gans, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur LaRoe, V. A. Devlin, Miss Fern Chapman, Miss Helen Hoffman, Dr. Lyle M. Mason, Dr. and Mrs. Paul J. Ewerhardt, Vincent Siccardi, M. E. Coulson, Mr. and Mrs. Ray H. Everett, Dr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Barris, Mrs. C. William Kinzer, Miss Elizabeth Bourne, Maj. G. S. Decker, Dr. Laura S. Brennon, Mrs. Robert Bates, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Broughton, Dr. W. L. Darby, Dr. Numa P. Adams, Miss Frances M. Bird, Miss Lida Usilton, W. H. Jernagin, Mrs. Mary Hopper Spencer, Miss Helen G. Vories and Dr. and Mrs. Alfred J. Aselmeyer.

Out-of-the-city guests will include Dr. William F. Snow, general director, American Social Hygiene Association, and Mrs. Snow, and Maj. and Mrs. Bascom Johnson, New York City; Dr. George Holden Coombs, State health commissioner.

Miss Naiman Wed to Texan

Miss Jeannette Naiman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Naiman, yesterday became the bride of Littman Danzinger, son of Mrs. Eva Danzinger, of Houston, Tex. The ceremony, witnessed only by members of the immediate families and a few close friends, took place at noon at the home of the bride's parents on Lanier place. Dr. Abram Simon and the Rev. Solomon Metz officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an ensemble of powder blue sheer wool. The short box coat was trimmed with blue fox and her navy turban was fashioned with a short veil. Her accessories were also of navy and a corsage of orchids completed her costume.

Julius Naiman, brother of the bride, served as best man.

Following a wedding breakfast the couple left for a trip to New York and Atlantic City. After May 1 they will be at home at 3150 Sixteenth street, where they have taken an apartment.

* * * *

Now on a motor trip to the South, Mr. and Mrs. John Leslie Pearson, jr., were married at 11 o'clock Saturday morning. The very quiet ceremony took place at the home of the Rev. H. W. Burgan, pastor of the Hamline Methodist Church, with Mr. Burgan officiating.

Mrs. Pearson is the former Miss Margaret Elizabeth Hutchings, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Hutchings, of this city, while the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Pearson, of Lakewood, Ohio.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride, who was unattended, wore a navy blue suit with accessories of the same color and a corsage of roses. The best man was Robert Nascrey, of Akron, Ohio.

Preceding the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served for immediate members of the family and the wedding party.

The couple on their return will make their home in Washington.

Mr. Pearson is a graduate of Duke University.

Women Scribes Are Entertained By Mrs. McLean

Members of Two Clubs Are Dinner Guests at Friendship.

Washington's feminine scribes locked up their typewriters last evening and stepped out to Mrs. Edward Beale McLean's, where members of the Women's National Press Club and the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington were wined and dined . . . thereby making news instead of reporting it.

In spite of the fact that Friendship sparkled with distaff notables, Mrs. McLean's Hope diamond sparkled even more, as, wearing a black-spangled dress cut on simple lines, she gave the glad hand to 150 guests.

In addition to active members of the two press organizations, there were also present (to give that royal purple touch), many associate members of the Newspaper Women's Club, of which Mrs. Ned Brunson Harris is president. They sat down with Washington's outstanding pencil jugglers and notebook nursers at tables for ten in the large dining room.

The "associates" included Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, wife of Representative Bacon; Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the United States Mint; Mrs. Perry Heath, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, Mrs. Clarence Lea, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, Mrs. L. H. Brousseau, who came all the way from Greenwich, Conn., to attend; Mrs. Charles Stanley White and Mrs. Felix Morley.

Also present and attracting plenty of attention was Nancy Randolph, spry society editor of the New York Daily News, who in private life is Mrs. J. Addison Robb, jr. Up from Nassau and Palm Beach, she is the house guest of Miss Doris Fleeson, president of the Women's National Press Club, and will be in Washington for several days.

Following the dinner the guests wandered about the spacious house, admiring Mrs. McLean's objects d'art and champagne. Later in the evening they gathered in the glassed-in solarium, where they saw the motion picture, "Over the Wall."

This is the second time that the Hope diamond and its owner have entertained the members of the two newspaper women's organizations at dinner. In 1936 she feted them at luncheon instead. Last year she was one of the guests of honor at the stunt party given by the Women's National Press Club.

Tour to Include Unrestored Homes

The Alexandria Association's tour of old houses on Saturday, April 16, from 11 to 5, will include several houses that have never been restored nor "improved" and yet are outstanding for their architectural beauty. One of these belongs to the United States Military Attache to Mexico, Maj. Marshburn, and Mrs. Marshburn.

Standing on a slight incline above the Potomac, it still boasts a fine stairway and some arches. The loggia at the back overlooking the river is beautiful in proportion and design.

This property was left by John Dalton to his daughter, Mrs. Catherine Bird, whose granddaughter, Pamela Cunningham, marshaled the women of America to save aging Mount Vernon as a shrine for the Nation. George Washington's Potomac plantation is now owned and managed by a board of regents, chosen from each State, who form the Mount Vernon Ladies Association.

Clarence A. Phillips Will Lecture on Iberia

Mrs. Agnes Giles Newman, chairman of current events for the Women's City Club, announces that tomorrow at 5 p. m. Clarence A. Phillips, of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, will give an illustrated talk on Spain and Portugal, using lantern slides in color he took in those countries two years ago.

Tomorrow evening at 8 the board of directors will meet with Judge Mary O'Toole, vice president, presiding.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Bachelor of 30 Worries Constantly; 'In Fact,' He Says, 'Worry Dominates My Life;' What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a constant worrier. In act, worry seems to dominate my whole life. I get very nervous and don't seem to be able to cope with common everyday occurrences. Incidentally, I am 30 years of age and unmarried. Do you think I am neurotic? If so, what can I do to help myself? To whom can I go for medical advice, if it is necessary? I am employed at a fair salary but have several dependents, so you see my allowance for medical purposes is limited. You have sometimes referred persons with similar symptoms to the Washington Life Adjustment Center. Do you think that is the place for me to go? Please answer as soon as possible. MAN' READER.

• • • •

DEAR MAN READER: In my opinion, you need a thorough overhauling by a first-class diagnostician. The person whose health is sound does not, as a rule, give way to chronic worry. His abundant physical vitality demands vigorous activity of a kind that is inimical to mental fretfulness. Unfounded worry sometimes has its origin in glandular distress. For instance, one may be suffering from an over-active or under-active thyroid. Or, again, it may stem from focal infections, such as diseased tonsils or teeth or sinuses. It can, of course, be a bad habit tracing back to an emotionally insecure childhood; and the habit of mental depression can, in time, begin to exact its toll in organic and glandular affliction.

• • • •

Whatever the underlying cause, I am sure a diagnostician can discover and tell you how to correct it. If you need psychiatric assistance, of the kind that the Washington Life Adjustment Center supplies, the diagnostician will tell you so. Since you are 30 and unmarried, and burdened down with dependents, it may be that emotional frustration is your difficulty. The normal adult has an almost inexorable necessity, as a rule, to release his emotions along socially acceptable lines—through fatehood and parenthood—if his personality is to be kept happily adjusted and his nervous mechanism smoothly functioning. It may be that courtship and marriage would prove to be the cure-all of your ailment. However, these are merely suggestions. I advise you to see a diagnostician. M. H.

• • • •

She Fights Temptation.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 19 going with a boy of 22. Every time I see him I grow fonder of him and he seems to feel the same about me. In fact, we have stopped seeing each other temporarily for fear of something happening. Here is the problem: His boy wants me to belong to him just once, and says that after that, we won't have to worry about it happening again. He feels sure that nothing will come of it but I don't make myself think that way about it.

• • • •

He told me he never intends to see me again unless I give in to him. He's afraid, if he does see me, that he will lose his head for a minute and he doesn't want that to happen while I disapprove of it. He swears nothing will come of it, but I know of cases where just once was too much. He claims if I really feel about him as I say I do, that there would be no doubt in my mind. Is he right in saying that? Shouldn't I think of what might happen before going into it?

• • • •

What shall I do? I can't go on not seeing him, and I'm afraid if I do see him, I'll give in to him. Should I belong to him just once to try to forget him? He is a fine boy and isn't the type to run out and leave a girl if anything should happen. I know he really is sincere and honest in his feeling toward me. Please answer as soon as possible so I can get this off my mind. WORRIED.

• • • •

Libertine's Argument.

DEAR WORRIED: This young man doesn't know the meaning of the word love in relation to you. All he knows is the sensual hunger of animal passion. He cannot even be called your friend, for, as Thoreau says, "It is one proof of a man's fitness for friendship that he is able to do without that which is cheap and passionate. A true friendship is as wise as it is tender." Do you suppose any man who really loved a young girl would entertain the thought—much less give voice to it—of assaulting her? Only a man of brutish instincts and debased imagination would poison the atmosphere with such a suggestion. True love seeks only the best welfare of the person beloved, whereas lust seeks only to possess, for purposes of self-gratification solely, the object of attraction.

• • • •

Your suitor's argument that "if you really feel about him as you say you do, there would be no doubt in your mind," is the whiskered argument of every libertine (when dealing with a naive maiden) since the beginning of time. So, also, is his threat not to see you again unless you give yourself to him. Love inspires the growth, in the true lover's heart, of all the best elements in his nature—generosity, protectiveness, reverence, gentleness, understanding, compassion.

• • • •

If this man loved you, he would take the initiative in protecting your innocence. With gentleness, strength and pride, he would glory in the task of keeping the relationship to the highest possible spiritual, social and physical level. Not only would he discipline himself, but he would bend every effort to see that your sexual emctions were not prematurely awakened. He would, I repeat, if he loved you; for he would realize that love has its successive seasons for its progressive stages of development; and he would be looking forward to a lifetime with you, knowing that you would be his, in dignity and beauty, in all good time. It is because he does not love you but only desires you, that he presumes to attempt this sharp bargain with you.

You say you "can't go on not seeing him." But I predict that if you do go on seeing him, and on his own terms—which will prevail if you continue seeing him—that there will come a time when you won't see him because he will have turned to some other girl whose charms are fresh and unfamiliar. The decision to see or not to see him will, by then, be out of your hands. If you would remain mistress of this situation, you must tell him that by the terms of his bargain, your friendship is at a dead and everlasting end. Incidentally, don't fool yourself that this would be a case of "just once and never again." After a first time, the walls of psychic resistance against that particular person are forever razed. That, among other things, is a very important reason why a girl's chastity is best kept inviolate until after marriage.

Did you, by any chance, read the letter signed "Fools," published in this column on April 2? If not, I recommend it to your attention. The writer, a despairing, unwed, expectant mother, closed with these words: "And if you ever get a letter in future from any youngsters, asking whether to do or not to do, tell them about us and what we did, and tell them the cost is too high." M. H.

Simplicity For Spring Dining

FINE BLACK SILK jersey fashions this smart evening ensemble by Paquin. The bodice and bottom of skirt are made of pleats which run both vertically and horizontally. A deep V inset of gold, red and blue metal cloth gives interesting color contrast to the bodice; silver fox forms the revers of the gracefully flaring cape.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, April 10.

THE SOFT BREEZES from the South these days are bearing more than promises of heat to come. They are also wafting to New York the poor exhausted swells of the town, who have worn themselves to a thin frazzle relaxing viciously and trying to amuse themselves all winter at Palm Beach, the Coney Island of society.

ALICE HUGHES

One by one they drift back to our little town between the rivers, summoning their last ounce of fortitude to stroll Fifth and Park avenues next Sunday as a boon to the starting herd. Then, for there is no rest for either the wicked or the opulent, they will be staggering off again to the mountains or the sea to fight the whole bitter battle against boredom during the summer. What a life!

Happily, however, there is always something to give their thin pulses a faint jounce and partially open those weary eyes. Even though they were foully cheated of a chance to curtsy to the Duke and Duchess of Windsor a year ago, this spring authentic royalty is surely approaching our shores, and already Fifth avenue grenadiers are dusting off and trying on their coronets. The Crown Prince of Sweden and his consort will be among us soon to represent their happy, peaceful land at the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the founding of the first Swedish colony in America. Of course, his family, the Bernadottes, have only been royal since Napoleonic times—but doggone it, they are royal, and no one can snicker it off.

• • • •

They'll be the guests of the H. Edward Manvilles, whose daughter, Estelle, married the prince's cousin a decade ago. And if our plush-lined ladies and gentlemen can keep awake over the backgammon board long enough, the presence of Swedish royalty this spring should cause some pretty fancy didoes in their set. Every cloud, to invent a phrase, has a silver lining, and maybe our honored Swedish visitors can perk up the army of ennui along Golden Gulch!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The other day some fiend snuk into Ethel Barrymore's dressing room and snuk out again with $74 and two costly sapphire rings. And did she yell murder, and fill the papers with lines about actresses losing millions in jewels, as was once the stage fashion? Not Aunt Ethel. She merely reported it to the constable and begged for no publicity! There's a change for you—thank goodness . . .

Incidentally, Miss Ethel's show, "Whiteoaks," is packing in the vernal customers, and many critics call it her finest performance in a dozen years. Better see her play the centenarian granny, for she may retire again soon, like she did a year ago. 'Member? . . .

No Rough Cloths Used on Her Face By Anita Louise

Anita Louise has never used any rough cloths to cleanse her face. Instead, most of her life she has used fingerless velvet mitts and her complexion is as flawless as a baby's.

Gale Page includes four shades of nail polish in her beauty kit—different colors for different times of the day. She likes light rose for morning wear, a burgundy shade to harmonize with afternoon costumes, pale copper tones for sports and a rich garnet shade for evening and artificial lights.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Personality Test.

THERE are 20 questions and each "yes" counts 5. Oh, well, this will be easy, you think gleefully, as you take up your pencil. This is one place you will shine. You have never been any great shakes for looks, but you have always been long on character. Of course, this is personality—but then the two are virtually the same.

"A grade of 70 is fair," say the directions, "80 is good and 90 excellent." Well, you ought easily to make 100—on this. You turn confidently to the first question.

• • • •

1. Do you have a good disposition?

Yes, indeed! You put down a big black 5.

• • • •

2. Are you easy to get along with?

Of course! Too easy! You start to put down your 5—Wait! A medley of feminine chatter rises out of memory. "Now I can get along with anybody if——," "Well, all I say is if people can't get along with ME ——." Well, you don't care. You ARE easy to get along with. You mark down the 5.

• • • •

3. Are you tolerant of other people's faults . . . never critical . . . or exacting . . .?

We—ell . . . maybe you had better leave that one for awhile.

• • • •

4. Do you go out of your way to be friendly to other people?

Guiltily you remember how yesterday you dodged around the perfume counter in a department store to miss Madge Leech; how you walked up three flights of steps because Mr. Kidder was taking the elevator; how you pretended not to see Miss Carp in the restaurant . . . No, you get zero here.

• • • •

5. Do you remember your friends' birthdays . . .?

Heavens, No! You triy to forget ALL birthdays.

• • • •

6. Are you punctilious about social obligations, promptly answer all letters . . .?

Well, not quite all.

. . . write thank-you notes, send gifts to your hostess, unfailingly arrive on time?

Oh, you might as well be honest and give yourself zero.

• • • •

7. Do you instinctively like and warm up to people?

That depends. You give yourself a grade of 2½.

• • • •

8. Do you entertain smoothly, gaily, graciously without fuss or worry?

A la Duchess of Windsor! Well of course you might if . . . Still what's the use to hedge? You resolutely put down a cipher.

• • • •

9. Can you talk easily, lightly on general subjects . . .

Well, you rather flatter yourself that you can. But wait——

. . . without talking about your own exploits or personal problems?

That's something else again. The truth is—you can't.

• • • •

10. Are you always perfectly groomed, hair smoothly coiffed, nails manicured, heels level, stocking seams straight?

Alas, no.

• • • •

11. Are you interested in other people's activities even when they don't concern you remotely?

If that means listening to Mr. Proser relate the details of how his company manufactures noodles, the answer is NO.

• • • •

12. Do you issue the first invitation to a new acquaintance?

Heaven forbid! You can't keep up with your old ones.

• • • •

13. Do you remember people's names and faces . . .

Well, maybe you had better give yourself something on this. You've only made 12½ so far.

. . . and never fail to recognize and greet them cordially?

You hesitate. Then your better nature triumphs and you put down a zero. Say, this is getting serious! You surely can stretch a point and give youself another 5—on something.

• • • •

14. Do you lead games at parties, get up picnics, enter wholeheartedly into stunts . . .

Now that's no fair. You try another.

• • • •

15. Do you enter into social activities of your community, join clubs, serve on committees?

Oh what's the use! It's getting worse all the time. Fifteen questions and you've made a grade of 12½! And 70 is "fair." You will stop right now and do something about yourself.

You put on your hat and go to the elevator. As you enter you smirk a bright and expansive "How are you today?" at the mystified operator.

BAKED STUFFED AVOCADO.

Split the avocado the long way, remove the seeds, brush with lemon juice, sprinkle lightly with salt. Have ready button mushrooms in a sherry newburg sauce, fill the avocado, place in an individual container. Bake from eight to ten minutes in a slow oven until the avocado is hot through.

Scrub for Elbows.

So that you need not be ashamed of your elbows when you don a sleeveless or short-sleeved dress, make a practice of scrubbing them daily with warm, soapy water and a soft brush. To give them a special treat, fill a good-sized bowl with thick suds, draw up a chair and let them soak for about five minutes while you listen to the radio.

Variety of Colors Feature Materials For Spring Wear

Paris (U.P.).—Colors and color ensembles are the outstanding features of the new spring materials. Lesur, one of the leading fabric houses of Paris, is dyeing his latest material, called "Tortaz," in 198 different shades.

"Morocco" is a popular range of colors comprising oranges, copper-reds and sandy-yellows. Taken from the modern French paintings are the smart putty shades, azalea-pinks and pale beige. There also is a group made up of watery blues, greens and grays, while the series of garden colors include the strong greens, pinks and blues.

Among Meyer's most important canvases are those line-checked with dark colors on pale grounds. The stripes and colors which are selling the best for spring are reds and pinks, such as raspberry, cyclamen and brick-red, as well as the soft yellows, amber and cinnamon.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Exercise, Fresh Air Will Cure That Lackadaisical Spring Fever.

By Ida Jean Kain.

YOU MAY CONTEND that there is no such thing as spring fever, but we know there is. We've got it. It's like this: You have a lazy, lackadaisical feeling, your mind goes woolgathering, as irresponsible as a breeze, and you may even be assailed by an undignified longing to play marbles in the streets with little boys. Those are the symptoms. Oh, so you have it, too!

Even those skeptics, the scientists, admit there is some excuse for spring fever. They explain it as weariness after excessive business activity during the winter, a reaction to lack of sunlight and a general let-down. But instead of sticky tonics and medicines for this springtime lethargy, they advise exercise more fresh air and sunlight, and a lighter diet.

The old-fashioned hardening up process continues to be the best antidote you will find for spring fever, and it is not to be surpassed for remaking your figure. Dig in the garden, borrow a lawnmower, take up bicycling, play golf, or walk to tone your muscular system. Besides helping you to throw off your lethargy, this outdoor activity slims unnecessary inches off your figure.

During the winter months you softened up. You need to get out and exercise, and any activity that takes you out into the fresh air is tonic to nerves and muscles. Digging in the garden may make your back ache, but it also trims the waistline and tones the tummy muscles. Pushing the lawnmower puts every last reluctant muscle to work, but it is especially good for the arms and shoulders, for it takes to task those soft muscles on the backs of the upper arms. This is also an excellent slimming measure for the midsection.

Spring is the time of the year to walk, and you should try to walk for at least 30 minutes every day. If you want to lose weight set yourself a brisk pace, and if you are trying to add curves saunter along leisurely. Speed is not everything: looks count for a great deal. The better you look while walking the better it is for your figure, so pull up with the lower abdominal muscles. Pulling up these muscles will automatically lift the chest, pull the hips in and bring your figure into beautiful alignment. Don't try to hold your tummy in as you stride along. In the first place, you are not supposed to. Just concentrate on walking as tall as possible, with the up-pull originating in the lower abdominal wall.

It is time to leave off the heavy winter dishes and use more green vegetables, fresh fruits and milk. If you need to lose pounds as well as inches, you must count calories to keep your calorie intake lower than your energy output. The average person, however, can improve her figure by toning the muscular system thruogh outdoor exercises.

Swope Suggests U.S. Stimulate Job Guarantees

Says Security Act Should Be Changed to Reward Fair Employers.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 10.—Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Co., urged tonight that the Administration, in its efforts to stabilize employment, amend the social security act so as to reward employers who reduce unemployment and require workers to contribute to the unemployment fund.

In a national radio address (Mutual) Swope heartily indorsed the old-age provisions of the act but said the unemployment sections enacted by the various states failed to encourage a guarantee of employment or a minimum annual wage.

"The worst and best employers, the most difficult and easiest industries to stabilize, are treated exactly the same," he said.

Praises Wisconsin Act.

"The maximum tax is collected from all alike and put in a common fund; if one company or one industry has no unemployment whatsoever, it pays the same tax as another company or industry where unemployment is excessive."

He said the General Electric Co., with a pay roll of more than $15,000,000 a year, had given guarantees of employment or a minimum annual wage from 1931 to 1937, but had discontinued doing so because the social security act offered no encouragement.

He noted Wisconsin as one of the few States having satisfactory laws in this respect.

"I approach this not primarily to reduce the amount the employer shall pay," Swope continued. "I would see no objection . . . to the employer's contribution remaining as it is, but the employe should also contribute, which would increase the amount available for benefits.

"The important thing, it seems to me, is to have the employe vitally interested in this . . . then he will give thought to it, make suggestions and look much more critically, intelligently and constructively upon the administration of the plan . . .

"I have never heard one word of criticism or complaint from the employes who have borne a portion of the cost of unemployment compensation."

Miss Perkins Talks.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins spoke on the same program, a symposium on "Government and Business Co-operation."

Reviewing Administration efforts to stabilize employment, she noted such measures as the social security act, the Civilian Conservation Corps, the WPA and the Labor Department employment service.

Minimum wage and hour laws and solution of the problem of the worker over 40 would also be of substantial aid in checking business recessions, she said.

"High wage levels, fairly distributed, will do as much good as any one thing to maintain steady working conditions, a good internal market and stabilized industry," she said.

"Industry is coming to recognize that the maintenance of a high wage and a short week is important."

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Reflection

Today, three days after the death blow, the reorganization bill lies a-molding in the ground. Much that is good and much that is bad joins it in the dust. And since so much of it was bad—or else futile—let no tears fall; it is better buried But, we predict, something of it will go marching on—and if it does, all the rumpus will have been for the good.

We mean that maybe, from all the fuss about the proposed change of the civil service setup, there may come a popular attention to the hammered idea hereabouts that Congressmen should leave the public service alone, so far as appointing of public personnel is concerned. At least all who read of the reorganization bill were acquainted with the fact that there is a Civil Service Commission which tries—and has tried against considerable odds—to put capable people in responsible Federal positions; they may have smelled out that the one and greatest obstacle to this end is the grab-bag of patronage wielded by their Representatives and Senators in Washington.

They may get the idea that their pocketbooks and all else concerned would be benefited by bringing the whole kit and kaboodle of Federal jobs under the blanket of Civil Service—which at least makes an effort to pick competent men whereas the Congressmen, as hiring agents, don't.

And, lucklessly, we are not too certain that their civic bosoms have been so impressed with the idea in the past. For some time we have read statements of civil service friends and groups to effect that the public is aroused over the spoils system. We have feared the wish was father to the thought. In all the realities, it has appeared that a majority of the public pays but little attention to the grab bag. The chorus of resentment seems to be in Washington and seats of State government, where the practice is more at the eye.

In the hinterlands (where the voters can be very effective at times) you hear such as this:

"Well, I see where Congressman ——— got old Jim a job the other day. Jim's moving to Washington soon. Think I'll see the Congressman about myself. I could do work up there just as good as Jim. Besides, I always voted for the Congressman and he shakes my hand whenever he gets 'round this way."

There is nothing fanciful about that dialogue. It happens and happens—and will happen until . . .

Congressmen know that their constituents want them in Washington as lawmakers and other wise to transact the Nation's business; that they weren't sent here as hiring agents.

Now, most of the voters back home have read of a great issue in Congress over a measure called reorganization, and that somewhere in the folds of the issue was the problem of giving the United States a competent set of workers. They may have read that all Federal workers should come in by merit rather than through the dubious avenue of patronage. Maybe, the idea will impress them—and they will tell their Congressmen.

The National Federation of Federal Employes announces the following meetings for this week: Tonight—8 o'clock, Treasury Department Local 262, 710 Fourteenth street northwest; Tuesday—8 p. m., Bureau of Engraving Women's Local 105, Willard Hotel; Wednesday—5 p. m., Executive Council, District of Columbia Federation of Federal Employees Unions, 710 Fourteenth street, and Friday—4:45 p. m., Bureau of Standards Local, 260, at the Bureau; 5 p. m., Executive Council Local 2, 710 Fourteenth street. The Virginia Society of the District of Columbia holds its next dance on April 25 at the Willard Hotel. The event will be in commemoration of Thomas Jefferson's birthday anniversary. There will be a prominent guest speaker.

Robert S. Monahan, of the Forest Service, who spent an entire winter atop Mount Washington with a scientific expedition, will lecture at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening in the North Interior Building auditorium under auspices of the Potomac Appalachian Trail Club. The talk will be illustrated by slides and interesting, we promise you. Henry C. Iler, national organizer for the American Federation of Government Employees, has returned here from an extensive trip through the South and West, reporting a large recruitment.

Farm Credit Club hikers will move off on an 8-mile walk (Sunday, April 24) from Ellicott City, Md. A forest ranger will accompany them, pointing out interesting features of the landscape and the interesting vegetation along the way. The hike will be taken jointly with the Wanderlusters of Baltimore. The Educational Committee of the Farm Credit Club will sponsor a showing of the film, "Coast to Coast by Plane," at 4:30 p. m. Friday in room 358. The room seats only about 100 people; no passes will be issued and no seats reserved. . . . FCA girls have decided to enter a women's softball team in the Government League.

Notes: Arthur Cornwall, known to Washington Federal employes and to music lovers hereabouts, will appear as vocalist on April 22 at the forty-seventh Continental Congress of the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution, in Constitution Hall. He will render four songs. Miss Beth King, Washington pianist, will be his accompanist. . . . The District Department, American Federation of Government Employes sponsors an excursion to New York City this week-end. The trains will leave here Friday and Saturday at 1:30 p. m., with a 10-day return limit on tickets. . . . The Democratic Absentee Voters Bureau notifies Virginia voters that they must pay their poll tax by May 7; that the primary election will be held on August 2, with the general election on November 8. Mrs. Hortense Sirmon is Virginia State chairman for the bureau.

Hygiene Society To Map War on Venereal Ills

Dinner Meeting Is Set Tomorrow as Bulwinkle Hearings Begin.

With hearings on the Bulwinkle venereal disease control bill scheduled to begin tomorrow morning, the District Social Hygiene Society will hold its twentieth annual dinner meeting at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest, at 7 tomorrow night.

Prevalence of venereal disease in the District as revealed in the recent United States Public Health survey, and recommendations for the anti-syphilis and gonorrhea campaign will be discussed at the dinner. Principal speakers will be Senator Robert M. La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Dr. Arthur T. McCormack, Dr. William F. Snow, general director of the American Social Hygiene Association, will be present.

At the House hearings, beginning at 10 a. m. tomorrow, witnesses will include Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the United States; Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, of New York; the Rev. Dr. Oscar Blackwelder, pastor of the Church of the Reformation, Washington; W. R. Ogg, director of research, American Farm Bureau Federation, Washington; Dr. J. Earle Moore, of Johns Hopkins University, and others.

Felix Morley to Speak Before Princeton Club

Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post, will be the guest speaker at the monthly luncheon meeting of the Princeton Club, to be held Wednesday at 1 p. m. in the Cosmos Club.

Winner of the Pulitzer prize for editorial writing in 1936, Morley was a member of the Baltimore Sun editorial staff before coming to The Post in 1933.

Contract Bridge

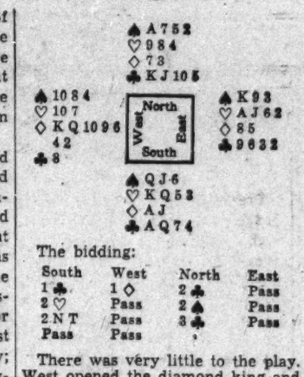
How Duplicates Are Won—and Lost.

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

My best and surest source of supply for interesting hands is the average duplicate game, and I have found on many occasions that "kibitzing" supplies me with more material than I could gain from actually playing.

In a recent duplicate I watched a certain pair play four boards, and when the final results were announced I was not at all surprised to find that this pair had come out with top score. Incidentally, it was not the best pair in the field. One of the partners was a national master, but he had to "carry" a player who was far from expert. The first hand I watched is described below; the other three will follow successively, from tomorrow on.

Both sides vulnerable.
South, dealer.
Match-point duplicate.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	1 ◇	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 N T	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
Pass	Pass

There was very little to the play. West opened the diamond king and declarer had little trouble in holding his loss to one diamond, one spade and one heart. West, the expert, felt very good over this result because he saw at a glance that a game in notrump would have been easy for North-South. His satisfaction was short-lived, however. The traveling score sheet revealed the almost incredible fact that four North-South teams had actually reached three notrump only to be defeated from one to three tricks! West shook his head in bewilderment. It was quite obvious that against an opening diamond lead South would merely have to hold up his ace, and that after that West's hand would be dead. There was only one possible conclusion and that was that most declarers playing three notrump had lacked the foresight to make that hold-up play. Questioning of several declarers after the game substantiated this conjecture. Two of them said that the idea of West holding a seven-card suit without an entry had simply not occurred to them. The other two belligerently pointed out that they had figured on West, rather than East, holding the heart ace and that they had pounced on the first diamond trick so as to give the impression that they still had the guarded jack. Their idea, of course, was that when West took the lead with the hypothetical heart ace he would be afraid to lay down the diamond queen. The obvious answer to this was that any West in his right mind would know that South did not originally have the A-J and a small diamond, because with that holding no declarer would accept the first trick—and would welcome the chance to make a Bath Coup, holding up the ace and hoping for a diamond continuation into the A-J. Thus, since West was just as revealing on declarer's part to accept as to refuse the first diamond trick, obviously the hold-up play should have been made on the bare chance that West's vulnerable overcall was based on a long suit and no outside entry.

This was one hand where the team I was watching got decided the worst of it.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Approximately nine-tenths of the answers ventured by Washington wags shots to questions about the Family Crisis can be summed up in the classic sentence:
"Yes and no, but don't quote me."

A little confusion has developed about which Bridges is on deck for deportation; whether it's Harry Bridges, the labor leader, or Senator Henry Bridges, the G. O. P. trigger-man.

Joe Kennedy wanted to deport Harry Bridges, to Australia; several Democrats want to deport Henry Bridges to New Hampshire, far from the TVA.

Jean de Sibour
Viennese boom.

Since a Government expert on Austria revealed that many women prefer Viennese styles to the whims of Paris, business ought to boom for charming Jean de Sibour, daughter of the former Austrian minister, who runs a dress shop in Washington.

Someone passing the legation, which the Nazis told the Prochniks to vacate by this week, saw a big moving van in front of it labeled "Security." (At first the impression was that they must vacate in 24 hours after the putsch.)

"—cocktails and turkey."

Some of the Capital's invitations which read "Cocktails, 5 to 7," are magnificent examples of understatement. They're just a come-on.

At the William Shearers' recent soiree, for example, the cocktails were reinforced by roast turkey, baked Virginia ham, spaghetti, chicken salad and several other substantial delicacies . . .

But Bill Shearer is an honorary admiral in the Big Navy crowd, and Big Navy people have big appetites.

In the heat of the debate on the reorganization bill (laughingly called the "dictatorship bill") Representative Caroline O'Day sat in the House fanning herself with a gilded fan.

Room temperature was 69 degrees, but the heat was terrific.

The latest version of the President's midnight dispatch from Warm Springs is attributed to a Cabinet member:

Early in the evening Senator Byrnes and Representative Rayburn phoned Mr. Roosevelt from Washington, urging him to dispel all the "dictatorship propaganda" with a forthright utterance.

His letter was thus a response to urgent pressure by his shock troops in Congress.

At the moment, the President's secretaries and all the journalists except one were off somewhere picking violets or boning up on the social sciences.

When they were told by phone that something hot was coming up, according to one version the impression prevailed that it was an April fool joke . . . It was after midnight before they were rounded up.

At his last press conference (the day the reorganization bill was defeated) President Roosevelt alluded testingly to this midnight nervousness when he suggested that at their next annual dinner the White House correspondents appear in nightgowns and pajamas.

A Senate committee meeting broke up the other evening, frustrated, because one member was in a whimsical mood . . .

They were arguing about the degree of tax immunity enjoyed by Americans and Spaniards living in the Philippines.

"Why," asked one member, "should a Spaniard enjoy any more tax immunity in the Philippines than a Spaniard in Kalamazoo, Michigan?"

This released something in the whimsical Senator's mind. He kept muttering "Spaniard in Kalamazoo? Mustn't let Spaniards bomb Kalamazoo." So the committee adjourned.

For the Open Air Hall of Fame I nominate Representative Dirksen, of Illinois . . .

Citation: "For slapping an income tax on the District of Columbia, but exempting himself and other Congressmen; for blocking an increase in the whisky tax while upping the annual pension bill; for keeping the Treasury door ajar with one toe, while under hot enemy fire."

"—courage in high places."

As an instance of courage in high Government office, I like to think of a Cabinet member who traveled 1,500 miles with a small baby, not only changing its diapers but also washing them out and hanging them up in his railroad compartment to dry.

Nervous people who are alert for signs and omens are brooding about the splendid Andrew Jackson statue which stands in the center of Lafayette Square, opposite the front portico of the White House . . .

On its base is inscribed Jackson's famous challenging toast—"Our Federal Union—It Must Be Preserved." Wind and weather have so far eroded the stone that some of the letters are illegible . . .

Good chance for a man with a chisel to refresh the toast.

Junior Board Seeks a New Resort Route

Road Promised to Divert Peace Cross Traffic and Save Lives.

Alternate Highways Surveyed to Relieve D. C. Area Jams.

An intensive highway safety program, designed to save the lives of Washington motorists traveling to and from nearby shore resorts during the coming summer, was announced yesterday by the Junior Board of Commerce.

Six members of the board's suburban traffic committee, working in co-operation with Maryland authorities and the American Automobile Association, have prepared plans to divert traffic from the hazardous Defense highway and relieve congestion at Peace Cross in Bladensburg.

The Peace Cross bottle-neck, said another announcement, from the Keystone Automobile Club, has become one of the most notorious traffic danger centers in the East.

Only $8,500 Needed.

William S. Canning, the club's engineer director, declared conditions could be remedied for $8,500. This, he added, would give only temporary relief, but would serve to protect motorists until an adequate program is adopted.

Of the total amount necessary for immediate corrections, said Canning, $5,000 would widen the concrete paving and about $1,500 would install modern safety signals.

"With the start of heavy spring traffic over the Defense highway," the engineer said, "we have again urged the State of Maryland to take long-delayed action to at least temporarily remedy this situation."

New Road Planned.

The Junior Board of Commerce first approached the Maryland State Roads Commission.

Following a survey of possible alternate routes to resort points near Annapolis and Chesapeake Bay, the group secured a pledge of support from Maryland officials. It was agreed, according to the committee's announcement, that a new road, covering a short stretch between Central avenue, in Anne Arundel County, and a paved highway leading to beaches and bay resorts, would be cut through in time to meet the summer traffic peak.

In a survey last year, The Washington Post disclosed hazardous conditions on numerous nearby Maryland roads. Danger sites were described in a series of stories.

In its campaign to "educate" motorists against the use of major traffic-clogged resort highways, the junior board of commerce has undertaken a program to secure action where other safety agencies have failed.

Motorists Warned.

Ross R. Guthrie, chairman of the suburban traffic committee, said:

"We have studied the Peace Cross and Defense highway problems for several months. In spite of repeated complaints, conditions remain the same. There has been little or no effort to correct them. The junior board voted to investigate the situation. We contend that many lives can be saved if motorists will learn to avoid the danger routes even at the expense of additional mileage."

A new route now under consideration by the board, it was reported, actually cuts the distance to points south of Annapolis and adds but a few miles to places like Sherwood Forest and Severn River resorts.

Alternate Routes Surveyed.

It was recalled that one traffic mishap alone took the lives of five persons on the Defense Highway two years ago. Since then, the sharp turns and narrow pavement have taken other lives and injured scores.

Members of the board's committee have visited Baltimore for a conference with Maryland roads officials and have completed an exhaustive survey of secondary highways to and from the Capital. Details of the board's program are expected to be announced within the next two weeks.

Other members of the committee include Francis D. Stephens, Richard Ham, safety director of the AAA; William O. Herrimann, chairman of the board's full traffic committee; James Troth, Walter A. Miller and Francis Almirall.

Law Guild Votes For End of Arms Ban Upon Spain

Lifting of the arms embargo against Spain and amendment of the nautrality act to stop arms shipments to "aggressors" were advocated by 696 to 67 voters in a National Lawyers Guild referendum, it was disclosed yesterday.

The lawyers disapproved the "Ludlow amendment" requiring a popular referendum before declaration of war. Use of economic measures to enforce the Kellogg-Briand pact to outlaw war was favored by a 6-to-1 majority, but employment of military sanctions was downed by a 3-to-1 vote. By a 3-2 vote, the lawyers urged a "cash-and-carry" requirement in trade between the United States and victims of aggression.

One hundred and seventy-four voters opposed any Guild action on the Spanish issue. The lawyers also urged that the American Ambassador to Spain be ordered "to return to his post of duty in Spanish territory."

Minister Wigwags Sermon to the Deaf

Preaching in the sign language, the Rev. Arthur Boll last night urged the congregation to overcome their affliction in seeking spiritual help at Palm Sunday services for the deaf in the chapel of Christ Lutheran Church. Several students from Gallaudet College were in the congregation.

The Rev. Mr. Boll, pastor of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church for the Deaf in Brooklyn, N. Y., conducts a service here once each month. He also conducts a monthly service for the deaf at Martini Lutheran Church in Baltimore.

His work is sponsored by the board of missions of the Synod of Missouri, Ohio and other States, which also publishes a monthly paper, "The Deaf Lutheran."

Doctor Reports Rejuvenating Men Above 75

Lowsley Declares Results of Plastic Surgery Are 95% Successful.

Virtual re-establishment of youth for men more than 75 years of age was described as "a proven scientific fact" by Dr. Oswald S. Lowsley, internationally-known surgeon, at a meeting last night of the Pan American Medical Association.

Addressing a gathering of medical men at the Legation of Panama, Dr. Lowsley illustrated his lecture by a colored motion picture film depicting rejuvenation of a patient by means of plastic surgery.

The operation, performed by Dr. Lowsley on more than 100 cases with marked success, was introduced by the New York physician three years ago. Since that time, doctors in this country and abroad have tried the experiment with unusual success, the speaker said.

Citing one case in San Francisco, Calif., where he restored normal faculties to a 75-year-old man, Dr. Lowsley estimated that the operation was "successful in at least 95 per cent of cases if the patient has first been examined and accepted by me."

Reports 95 Per Cent Success.

A graduate of Stanford University, Johns Hopkins and Bellevue Hospitals, Dr. Lowsley is consulting urological surgeon to the Ruptured and Crippled, Peekskill, Monmouth Memorial and Bellevue hospitals and is recognized as a pioneer in genito-urinary surgery. He is also editor of the Oxford Urological Surgery and author of a number of medical articles. He retired from the United States Navy as a surgeon in 1918.

Explaining to members that the operation was not to be confused with the recent testosterone fluid experiments at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Dr. Lowsley pointed to the fact that the plastic surgery affects only the muscular sections of the patients.

96 Complete Cures.

"Although chances for complete restoration in patients more than 60 is slight," he declared, "I have handled several such cases successfully during the last year.

In 96 operations Dr. Lowsley said 17 patients were completely rejuvinated, in 31 the results were satisfactory and the remainder "good or fair."

The physician declared any doctor, trained in surgery of perinaeum, could perform the operation without danger and with a good chance of success.

Refusing to be interviewed by reporters after his lecture, Dr. Lowsley said, "I have already been swamped with requests for treatment since discovering the treatment and feel that I am not free to discuss the matter further publicly.

"It has been my practice to accept only those applicants wha have been referred to me by their family physician."

Other speakers were Dr. Edgard V. Allen and Dr. Hugh H. Young. F. Castillo Najero, president of the association, presided and Dr. Augusto S. Boyd, Minister to Panama, was honored guest.

Crowds Fill Churches for Palm Service

Chicago Theologian Says Message of Pageant Was Humility.

Culbertson Urges Need for Knowledge of Other Beliefs.

"The first Palm Sunday was a pageant that failed," Dr. Albert W. Palmer, president of Chicago Theological Seminary, told a large audience at First Congregational Church yesterday.

As he spoke, thousands of Washingtonians swarmed to churches throughout the city for Palm Sunday worship. Washington Cathedral alone accommodated 5,000.

President Roosevelt and members of his family and friends attended services at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church. In the party with him were his personal secretary, Miss Marguerite Le Hand; Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. James Hambley, of Hyde Park, N. Y., and Miss Margaret Suckley, of Washington. The First Lady was out of the city.

"In using the pageant, Jesus adopted a method familiar to the Jews and long employed by the prophets," Dr. Palmer continued. His vehicle, a humble donkey, emphasized the nonpolitical, nonviolent nature of his mission and his message was that in justice and good-will lies the world's salvation."

Dr. Palmer expressed the hope that the pageant which failed in Jerusalem might not do so in modern America and that mankind might yet be able to avoid destruction.

Dr. Palmer will be the speaker at a series of union Lenten services to be held each day this week at 12:15 and 8 p. m. at the First Congregational Church, Tenth and G streets northwest. Calvary Baptist Church and Mount Vernon Methodist Episcopal Church South are co-operating in the services.

Central Presbyterian.

Given the moral chance it deserves, modern youth will respond, Dr. James H. Taylor declared in his Palm Sunday message before a capacity congregation at Central Presbyterian Church.

"Youth, I know, is being blamed for much of what is wrong today," he said, "but we must keep in mind that youth and children are being exploited for commercial profit and the example of adults in many cases is tragic in the extreme."

Strongly condemning the influence of erotic literature on young people, he asked: "When every sort of crime is depicted in certain publications, so that any boy or girl can learn how to crack a safe, how to shoot with an automatic or plan a holdup, what chance does youth have when it is taught these things?"

"I hold no special brief with youth," said Dr. Taylor, "but those who have had the opportunity to live under wholesome influence should at least give the coming generation an equal opportunity.

"Youth is just as enthusiastic for reality and truth as it ever was, but if the type of religion that is being exhibited by many who are church members fails to awaken a response in the hearts and minds of youth the difficulty is not with Christianity but with the very poor and inadequate interpretation of the teachings of Christ."

Culbertson Talks.

Dr. William S. Culbertson, former Ambassador to Rumania, last night told a congregation at the National Open Parish, Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, that attempts should be made to find more "common denominators" in religion.

He explained that Catholics, Protestants and Jews can all agree on some basic principles. The trouble, he said, is that not enough effort is being made by churchgoers to find out the similarity in beliefs held by adherents to all Western religions.

Present at the meeting, in his first public appearance in Washington, was M. Radu Irimescu, newly appointed minister to the United States from Rumania. He spoke briefly.

Other speakers were the Greek minister, M. Demetrius Sicilianos; Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University; Harry C. Davis, secretary of the George Washington University board of trustees, and Dr. John Carruthers, chaplain of the Open Parish and director of the programs.

Medical Group Honors Oldest Members at Dinner

Physicians who have been members of the Conference of State and Provincial Health Authorities of North America 25 years or more were honored by the organization last night at a dinner at the Willard Hotel. Among those present were (top, left to right) Dr. Charles F. Dalton, health officer of Vermont; Dr. Thomas Crowder, head of the department of surgery and sanitation of the Pullman Co.; Dr. C. A. Harper, for 35 years health officer of Wisconsin, and Dr. R. E. Wodehouse, deputy minister of health for the Dominion of Canada. (Below) Maj. Gen. Charles R. Reynolds, surgeon general of the Army; Miss Katherine Lenroot, of the Children's Bureau, Department of Labor, and Dr. Robert H. Riley, president of the conference.

Public Health Association Head Lashes Conservatives in A. M. A.

Says Doctors' Leadership Is 'in Reactionary Hands of Those Who Get Us Nowhere;' Scores Dr. Cullen, of Baltimore.

Dr. Arthur T. McCormack, president of the American Public Health Association, lashed out at conservative trustees of the American Medical Association at a dinner at the Willard Hotel last night, which was attended by nearly 100 physicians prominent in the field of public health.

Following numerous speeches of reminiscence delivered by banquet guests who had been in public health work for 25 years or more, Dr. McCormack condemned the board of trustees of the American Medical Association for being "held tight in the reactionary hands of those who lead us nowhere."

Dr. McCormack, an officer of the A. M. A., paid warm tribute to the work of Dr. Thomas Cullen, of Baltimore, on the Maryland State board of health. When the applause died down the speaker referred to Dr. Cullen's membership on the A. M. A.'s board of trustees, and said, "at Chicago he votes to continue to do nothing for the progress of the medical profession." Dr. Cullen, who made a brief appearance at the dinner, was not in the room at the time of Dr. McCormack's sally.

Dr. Riley Presides.

The banquet, held in connection with the three-day conference of State and Provincial Health Authorities of North America, was in honor of members of more than 25 years standing. Dr. Robert H. Riley, chairman of the Maryland State board of health and president of the conference, was toastmaster.

Headed by Dr. Thomas Parran, jr., surgeon-general of the United States, guests at the speaker's table included many veteran American public health officers, as well as representatives of the Canadian and Cuban Governments.

Dr. R. E. Wodehouse, deputy minister of health of the Dominion of Canada, and Dr. Domingo Ramos, director general of health of the Republic of Cuba, gave short talks.

Miss Katharine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau, assailed governments that make the individual the servant of the state. Dr. Martha M. Eliot, assistant chief of the bureau, and Miss Maysil M. Williams, vice president of the conference, also spoke.

Final Session Today.

Others who talked briefly included Maj. Gen. Charles R. Reynolds, surgeon general of the Army; Dr. C. A. Harper, health officer of Wisconsin and oldest member of the conference in point of service, with a record of 35 years; Dr. Cullen; Dr. John A. Farrell and Dr. W. A. Sawyer, of the Rockefeller Foundation; Dr. C. Willard Camalier, of Washington, president of the American Dental Association; Dr. J. A. Hayne, health officer of South Carolina; Dr. F. E. Trotter, commissioner of health of Hawaii; Dr. William F. Cogswell, health officer of Montana; Dr. Charles F. Dalton, health officer of Vermont; Dr. Milton Rosenau, of the University of North Carolina; Dr. Thomas Crowder, of the Pullman Company, and Dr. Albert J. Chesley, secretary of the conference, who was in charge of dinner arrangements.

Final session of the conference will be held at 9 a. m. today at the United States Public Health Service Building.

Energy of Stars Is Topic Tonight

"The Energy Sources of Stars" will be discussed at a meeting tonight of the graduate council of George Washington University by Dr. George Gamow, professor of theoretical physics of the university.

He will outline some results of the Fourth Washington Conference on Theoretical Physics held March 21-22 at the university under joint auspices of the Carnegie Institution and George Washington.

Dr. Claude Heck Marvin, president of the university, will preside. Dr. Gamow will be introduced by Prof. Lowell J. Ragatz, program chairman.

Bridges Asks End of HOLC In Health War

Too Much Time Being Spent in Propaganda, Senator Asserts.

Demands Functions Be Transferred to Federal Housing Authority.

Assailing the activity of officials of the Home Owners Loan Corporation in support of the Group Health Association, Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, last night demanded that HOLC be abolished and its functions transferred to the Federal Housing Authority.

"A look at the recent activities of the HOLC officials," Bridges said, "leads one to believe they are spending far more time in propagandizing Group Health Association and attacking the medical profession generally than they are in attending to Government business.

"The activities of HOLC in connection with this group health program have been grossly improper from the outset. The HOLC was set up for the sole purpose of relieving individuals who were in financial difficulties in connection with loans on their homes. In spite of this, the HOLC contributed $40,000 of the taxpayers money to a private corporation engaged in a group health experiment."

$40,000 Called "Gift."

Senator Bridges said that HOLC officials admitted that this $40,000 was not appropriated for a Group Health Association experiment, but for other purposes.

"This gift to Group Health Association," he said, "was held illegal by the Acting Comptroller General; it was unanimously condemned by the House Appropriations Committee, and the Senate Committee actually amended the appropriation bill for last year to prevent similar donations in the future.

"The events of the last few weeks, however, show that despite this plain expression of Congressional sentiment, HOLC now is engaged in further subterfuge to contribute Government aid to Group Health Association. Government time and facilities are being used day after day for the promotion of the affairs of this group health experiment—an outside, private corporation.

Propaganda Assailed.

"The HOLC publicity staff, paid to dispense public information about Government activity, is releasing high pressure propaganda in behalf of the private health group, and attacking the Medical Society and the medical profession at large. Employees of HOLC hold extensive 'press conferences' on Government time. These actions are highly improper and definitely immoral, to say the least. We see one Government agency contributing Government time and Government funds to one private group of citizens to assist them in attacking another private group of citizens.

3 Women, 2 Men Injured by Autos

Five persons, three of them women, were injured in traffic accidents in and near Washington yesterday.

A car operated by Joseph F. Zegowitz, 27, of Soldiers' Home, collided on Scale House road, Soldiers' Home, with one driven by Bert N. Imphius, 28, of New York City. Zegowitz's car was overturned and three passengers injured.

Miss Mary Vilkaitis, 25, a Garfield Hospital nurse, sustained two broken collar bones and an injured hip; Winona Kay, 26, 1320 Twenty-first street northwest, contusions on her head, and Margaret Flynn, 21, 1757 Q street northwest, a broken collar bone.

Later in the day James Daly, 22, of 125 Quincy place northeast, was knocked down by an automobile at North Capitol street and Florida avenue. He suffered minor cuts and bruises.

Robert Taylor, 18-year-old Marlboro, Md., youth, was in an undetermined condition last night at Casualty Hospital. He is suffering from brain concussion and cuts on his head and mouth after an accident at Branchville, Md. He was taken to the hospital by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad.

Dixie Pictures Enhance Worry Of Selznick Co.

Delay in Producing 'Gone With Wind' Has Brought Serious Rivalries.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, April 10.—There doesn't seem to be much use, except for the record, for Producer David O. Selznick to go ahead with his long-delayed plans to make a movie of the novel, "Gone With the Wind."

Since Selznick bought it for a tremendous price from Miss Margaret Mitchell, he has been testing all the actresses in Hollywood, almost, for the part of the fiery Southern heroine, Scarlett O'Hara. At last reports he still was at it.

No projected movie ever had so many newspaper and magazine articles written about it. Everybody, it seemed, was wondering who'd make a belle of the fifties with a temper hot enough to take the part. Even the other movie producers began to wonder.

That was bad—for Selznick. Warner Brothers rushed to the screen last month their drama of the old South. It was entitled "Jezebel," it starred Bette Davis, and it was a smash hit. Bette was as mean as Scarlett. Maybe meaner. The Warners insisted, of course, that production of "Jezebel" was a mere coincidence. They said they hadn't even thought about "Gone."

Comes Another.

Their picture hardly was on the national distribution rolls, before the cameras began to grind M-G-M's "The Toy Wife." This film, oddly enough, was another drama of the old South. It starred Miss Luise Rainer, and it found her with a wasp waist, red wig and all the other equipment of Selznick's heroine to come.

The M-G-M experts echoed the Warner announcements. They said they also had no thought of "Gone" when they set "The Toy Wife" for production. They said they didn't even think the two pictures were similar.

Maybe so. All we know is what we saw on one of their sound stages today, to wit:

The red-haired Miss Rainer, having run away from her husband, Melvyn Douglas, in New Orleans, taking part in a love scene with Robert Young, a Southern gambler, in a long-tailed coat. She had on a green velvet dressing gown, she looked as beautiful as any Southern beauty and she was headed for no good end.

Her lover dies later in a duel with her husband, she dies of tuberculosis, and poor old Douglas marries her sister, Miss Barbara O'Neil whom he loved all along. If all that doesn't sound a little reminiscent of Scarlett's affairs with Melanie's husband in "Gone," we'll eat her Sunday bonnet.

A Viennese Southerner.

Miss Rainer, of course, is no ordinary Southern girl. She was born in Vienna and she still has a decided Germanic accent. So she's a Creole in the picture—and speaks with a French accent.

The production is a lavish one. It's in the hands of Richard Thorpe, one of M-G-M's ablest directors, and it ought to be a good show. It ought to be as good as Jezebel; perhaps better—all of which is no great cheer for Selznick, the man who originated the current cycle of Southern pictures, merely by talking about "Gone" in print.

Miss Rainer, two-time winner of the academy award for acting ability in "The Great Ziegfeld" and "The Good Earth," is one of the most attractive in-person persons we have yet seen in the studios. You'd never believe that the red-haired woman now on stage 17 is the same yellow-skinned, slant-eyed peasant who made "The Good Earth" memorable.

She is the wife of Clifford Odets, the New York playwright, who made his first reputation with "Waiting for Lefty," a one-act play of several seasons ago, about labor troubles. It was of such a radical nature that all the critics said it would never be a commercial success. It immediately became one. Odets has written several plays since then, including "Golden Boy," now current on Broadway.

Cliff Wears the Pants.

He even wrote a couple of movies, including "The General Dies at Dawn," one of the most rip-snorting melodramas we ever saw. Miss Rainer insists he wears the pants in their house; only she calls 'em trousers. She says nobody ever makes the mistake of calling her husband "Mr. Rainer." For that she is grateful.

He writes his plays at night. She works in her movies in the daytime. This is a nuisance, but they manage like the telegraph editor of a morning newspaper and his wife.

Miss Rainer thinks she would be a better actress than she is, if Americans could understand German. As it is, she has to translate all the English words she says into German, mentally, before she knows what she's talking about. This is awkward, but she believes she'll do better when she learns more about the English language.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Spring Parade of Troubadours Coming To Enliven Lovers of Stage Diversion

Many Stars of Stage, Screen and Radio Are Booked for Early Appearances on Local Stages; Patricia Bowman to Dance in 'Home Town;' A Very Young Youngster Writes (?) a Letter About That Black Cat; Mr. Morse Also Writes One About His Book.

"EASTER PARADES" seem to be the vogue of the moment in the downtown theaters featuring stage entertainment as well as de luxe screen bills.

BELL.

There is, it seems, to be an "Easter Parade" at the Earle next week and another one at Loew's Capitol. The Earle's will serve merely as an inauguration of a list of stage notables that are to appear continuously—week by week, that is—practically through the month of May.

The Easter week bill at the Earle will be headlined, in person, by Judy Canova, assisted by Sister Annie and Brother Zeke, probably the most expert exponents—if you can do with a bit of alliteration—of the Hill-billy type of song and humor. These rustic comics were last exposed to the admiration of Washington's theatergoing populace in that atrocious thing concocted by Fanchon, of the noted team of Fanchon and Marco, in which they constituted one of the few redeeming qualities.

For the following week, there is announced by Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner Brothers, a new personality, but one who rapidly is becoming a national favorite. This would be Tommy Riggs, with his "Betty Lou," a sometime feature on Rudy Vallee's air programs. Tommy has just completed a picture for Universal and now occupies the enviable position of being looked upon as radio's greatest discovery of the year. He projects two personalities—much after the manner of Edgar Bergen and his fabulous Charlie McCarthy—although Tommy does not employ a dummy and is not a ventriloquist.

Another noted personality on his way to a headline spot on the Earle stage is Al Pearce, genial comic, who will bring his gang from the "Watch the Fun Go By" program. Included will be Arlene Harris, the "human chatterbox"; Tizzie Lish, cooking and health expert; "Lord Bilgewater," author and riddle expert; Andy Andrews, the singing comic, and others.

An Earle stage attraction in May will be Wayne King and his orchestra of waltz magicians, one of the few musical organizations that have had the courage to ignore the "swing" craze.

The ace Warner house will inaugurate its spring season of screen hits this Friday with Carole Lombard and Fernand Gravet in "Fools for Scandal" and then will follow through, as we say at the ninth hole, with "There's Always a Woman," with Melvyn Douglas and Joan Blondell; "College Swing," with Burns and Allen, Martha Raye and Bob Hope; Harold Lloyd in "Professor Beware," his first picture in three or four years, and the long-awaited Technicolor production of "The Adventures of Robin Hood," in which the costellar roles are played by Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland.

You guessed it; nice going is what I always say.

• • • •

But there is something to think about in that other "Easter Parade," too. At Loew's Capitol next week the stage bill will include Sylvia Froos, Paul Gerrits, remembered as the amusing master of ceremonies at the midnight stage shows celebrating the President's Birthday last January, at both the Capitol and Earle theaters; Frank Libuse, the "colonel of American nuts"—or should it be spelled "kernel"?—the "eccentric legomania" of Charles Troy and Carol Lynne and, as an extra added attraction, that brilliant prima ballerina, Patricia Bowman, Washington's own contribution to the ranks of the foremost exponents of the classic dance known to the contemporary stage.

Who will want to roll eggs with bills like these to be seen?

Having put me on the spot in the matter of that little black kitten, Managing Director Harry P. Somerville, of the Willard Hotel, proceeds to take me off again. Preliminary to this disclosure, however, it should be recorded that Mr. Somerville became a grandfather last Wednesday and on Saturday night departed for New York to make the acquaintance of his new red-headed (so he tells me) grandson.

But the point is that this particular first grandson of a grand fellow is precocious beyond his days. Just read the letter he wrote his grandpop, under date of June 7, for instance:

"Dear Gramper Somerville: Me—three days old and wishing I'd never been born! A grand grandpop you are! Wait 'til I get a swig of milk so's I can go at this thing right! Now listen to me.

"That kitten you offered Nelson Bell—can't you pussyfoot around and renig on it? Kittens were given tails to be pulled by kids like me. Its a catastrophe—accent on the 'cat'—losing that feline with me just reaching malteasing age.

"If you're purrticular about pleasing me, purrhaps you can purrsuade that Bell guy to order another kitty from the mail order 'cat'-alogue and gimme the one you giv' him.

"I'll cat-nap while I'm waiting to hear from mew. YOUR LITTLE STORKY GRANDCHILD."

Well, sonny, you've got me licked! It's all yours—the cat, best wishes for as illustrious a life as your grandpappy's and everything else that might add to your happiness.

What else can one do in a case like this? But, even at that, I don't think this young fellow, at the age of three days, ever wrote that letter. I'm dumb, yes, but not that dumb—I hope!

So today they are screening "The Charm of La Boheme." By "they" would be meant Mrs. Miller and Abe Tolkins, managerial directors of the Little Theater. This is a musical thing that has "caught on" in New York and will be given a first local run here at the Little. The screening is today at 1:30 in the bijorium theater of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange. More of this later.

Now that Postmaster General Farley's minions of the mail have started writing this column, they might as well continue, as far as I can see. Under date of April 9, comes this:

"Dear Nelson: I'm glad to see that you're swapping compliments with Ward Morehouse, of the New York Sun. That gifted dramatic commentator, in my opinion, is a swell guy. He gave my book, 'Back Stage With Henry Miller,' a powerful boost several weeks ago and has since carried a flock of petulant remarks directed at me by Lee Shubert, all of which have mentioned the name of the book.

"Proof that the public will read all insults printed by you critics comes in the following letter I've just received from A. E. Thomas, author of many plays, seven of which were staged by Henry Miller.

"Al writes: 'I see you've started a battle with the Shuberts. I hate to boost you, as you know, but you've been so crafty (in getting Lee Shubert to keep talking about the book) that it leaves me no option. Barring all that, I must say that, in view of your obvious handicap of low Washington associates (does he mean newspaper or New Deal associates? asks Mr. Morse) you've done a good job on your story of Henry Miller. I have just read your book, which was awaiting me on my return from Bermuda. Of course, your references to me are mostly libelous, but I shall forgive you because of your treatment of that great man to whom I owe so much, and for whom I shall always feel real affection and gratitude.'

"Incidentally, the book is booming along. It has broken Dutton records for stage biographies and I hear this morning that one of the big New York shops has just put it in their rack of 'books that are best sellers.'

"Consequently, I am, cheerfully yours, (Signed) FRANK P. MORSE."

I still think "Back Stage With Henry Miller" is a good book.

Meteorological Note.

Why not do your own talking about the weather?

Little

The last picture ever made with Rudolf Valentino as star, and released posthumously, was revived yesterday as chief feature of the new screen bill at the Little Theater.

This was "The Son of the Sheik" (pronounced "Shake," incidentally) and its presentation yesterday on Ninth street marked the "world premiere" of its reissue for general distribution.

"The Son of the Sheik," of course, was inspired by the same star's overwhelming success in "The Sheik." It also has to do with Arabs and the romantic mysteries of the desert. In this subject, Valentino appears both as father and son—one of these dual-role impersonations that were deemed so remarkable at the time of the picture's original release.

It did tremendous business yesterday. Just as thousands—and this is to be taken literally—were turned away from the Rialto when "The Four Horsemen" recently was shown there, so yesterday were hundreds shunted away from the Little because there were no more vacant seats to be had.

In the supporting cast are to be found a great number of the foremost luminaries of the silent screen, foremost among them being Agnes Ayres and Montagu Love. The cast, as a matter of fact, bristles with names that were famous during the era of the silent "movie." The picture deserves to be seen as an enduring monument to the memory of its star.

As additional attractions on the new bill at the Little are shown "Alice in Wonderland," in which the lovely Bennett sisters, Joan and Constance, appear, and a 1922 newsreel that is among the foremost of the laughmakers as an exhibit of how crude methods and processes were a few decades ago.

This is a bill that may be highly recommended to the antiquarians.

AMONG CAPITAL'S EARLY ENTERTAINERS.

Left—Bette Davis, in "Jezebel," returning to the Metropolitan Theater on Friday. Right (above) Patricia Bowman, Washington's premiere danseuse, who will be seen soon on the stage at Loew's Capitol Theater as a featured artiste in the "Easter Parade" of stars. A graduate of the old St. Patrick Players, Miss Bowman long has enjoyed the distinction of sharing honors as a ballerina with the foremost dancers of classic type contributing their talents to the stage. Inset—Slyvia Froos, famous singer of stage, screen and radio, who also will be among the pre-eminent specialists coming soon to a Washington stage.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, April 10.

POLITICS: Frank Sullivan went to Washington to attend his first Presidential press conference. Arthur Krock, of the Times, advised him to rush inside the conference room as soon as the doors were opened—so that he'd get a place near the President . . . Frank heeded the advice, rushed inside and found himself standing near Roosevelt's desk, alone—while the Capitol reporters straggled in . . . To quiet his nerves, Sullivan placed his hands in the rear pockets of his trousers—and then became aware of the fact that the Secret Service guards were eyeing that move with great suspicion. The President looked up and settled their fears. "Frank," he asked, "you're not related to MARK Sullivan, are you?"

• • • •

FOREIGN DISPATCH: The door-knob at the American Embassy in London, for some mysterious reason, is only 30 inches from the floor . . . When the new Ambassador Jaseph P. Kennedy arrived at the Embassy for the first time, he groped for the knob, and finally found it. "What's the idea of this?" Kennedy asked. "Who were my predecessors—the Seven Dwarfs?"

• • • •

BOOK DEPT.: The Houghton, Mifflin Co. publishes the American edition of Adolf Hitler's "Mein Kampf." A new edition was printed as soon as Hitler marched his troops into Austria. This new edition is tricolored . . . Brown, yellow and black . . . and the publishers are relieved. The previous edition had a cover of red, yellow and black. When the first copies were distributed the German Embassy immediately registered complaint . . . "But those are very pretty colors," the publishers protested . . . "That may be," the Embassy replied, "but they are also the colors of the German Republic!"

• • • •

FASHION NOTES: When Anne Clark, fiancee of John Roosevelt, was in La Conga this week, Charles de Soria, the cafe's photographer, went to her table and introduced himself as the one who is responsible for most of the pictures of her sister, Sally, which have been appearing in the newspapers . . . "It's been a great honor, photographing your sister," he stated, "and I hope you've liked the pictures" . . . "I have," Ann replied, "but tell me—is that the only dress my sister ever wears?"

• • • •

EMILY POST DEPT.: Oscar Levant, the composer, became attracted to a young girl in Hollywood. Her mother insisted that before she would permit the young lady to accept a dinner-date she first would have to meet the young man's relatives . . . That evening Levant brought a man he introduced as "my uncle" . . . The dinner-date never was consummated, because Levant's "uncle" chased the mother through every room in the house . . . The distressed lady still hasn't been told—that Oscar's "uncle" was Harpo Marx.

• • • •

CRIME DEPT.: This happened in Alcatraz, on the day after it was announced that two of the prisoners had escaped by swimming across the body of water which separates the prison from the mainland . . . John Paul Chase, member of the "Baby-face" Nelson mob, and now serving a life-sentence for the killing of G-men Cowley and Hollis, stenciled a note in the carpentry shop—a note he forgot to take back to his cell. The guards pounced upon it, unfolded and read: "Best-Seller (1938)—by Warden Johnston—'Gone With the Tide.'"

• • • •

DRAMA DEPT.: Orson Welles, portraying Brutus, is the one who accidentally stabbed Joseph Holland, who portrayed Caesar on the stage of the Mercury Theater Wednesday night. The show just had moved from the National Theater, whose stage is 6 feet longer. The accident occurred because both men, unaccustomed to the stage, misjudged the difference in distance when they rushed toward each other . . . After the performance Welles sped to Polyclinic Hospital, where Holland had been taken for treatment—but the police refused to allow him into the room . . . After he had made repeated attempts, the detectives finally demanded: "Who're you? . . . "Who'm I?" Welles informed. "I—I'm the guy who killed him."

• • • •

FINANCE DEPT.: "Charlie's Aunt," the play by Brandon Thomas, is the most successful farce ever produced in England. Despite the fact that Sydney Chaplin, brother of Charlie, had starred in the screen adaptation many years ago, a number of road companies still attract amazing receipts in the provinces—and to Brandon Thomas, author of this farce, has accrued fabulous royalties . . . But this entire fortune has been dissipated by his son, Jevan Brandon Thomas, who just filed a petition in bankruptcy. Jevan went broke—producing a group of serious dramas.

• • • •

ART DEPT.: Jim Thurber, cartoonist for The New Yorker magazine, has been in France these past few years. To Harold Ross, editor of the publication, he has sent but one serious painting, indicating his progress in art. The painting came from Antibes. It was a reproduction of a scene in San Francisco.

THEATER NOTES: One of the first theatrical critiques penned by Alexander Woollcott in a long time appears in a major metropolitan newspaper on Sunday . . . It's not a play which has roused Woollcott from his critical lethargy. He will review Cissie Loftus' Sunday night monologues.

Eight Pictures Before Camera, Universal Peak

Production activities at Universal studios have reached the highest peak of the year, Charles R. Rogers, in charge of production, has announced.

Rogers said that the studio was spending close to $3,500,000 on eight pictures now in production.

More than $1,000,000 each is to be expended on "The Rage of Paris" starring Danielle Darrieux and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and on "Letter of Introduction."

The latter picture has a cast that includes Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Andrea Leeds, George Murphy, Adolphe Menjou and Gail Patrick.

Rogers announced that Victor McLaglen, who made "The Magnificent Brute" for Universal, had been obtained to star in "Hell's Kitchen." This is a story of the fierce loyalists of a small "gang" of underprivileged children in a big city, after the children have grown. Paul Kelly, William Gargan and Frank Jenks are being featured with Beatrice Roberts, feminine lead.

The budget on "Hell's Kitchen" has been increased from $200,000 to $400,000. Ray McCarey is director. Edmund Grainger producer.

Another of the high bracket pictures now before the cameras is a story of the South Seas, "Sinners in Paradise" which also is costing $400,000. Heading the cast are John Boles, Madge Evans, Bruce Cabot and Marion Martin, "Broadway beauty No. 1."

A third $400,000 picture, "Goodbye Broadway" starring Alice Brady and Charles Winninger, has just been completed.

One of Universals numerous crack serials, "Flaming Frontiers" with John Mack Brown, is in production at a cost of $250,000. More than 500 extra players were on location at Kernville, Calif.

Larry Blake, Dick Purcell, Beryl Wallace and Mamo Clark top the cast of "Air Devils," a Trem Carr production of love and danger in the Pacific.

Star, Dancer and Singer Here Soon

In HOLLYWOOD With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., April 10.—Sonja Henie, that cuddly, dimply, happy Norwegian lass, with the twinkling smile, matching her toes, gave her first important house-warming for the troupe who shared honors and headlines on her sensationally successful trip around the country. Now that I mention that, why didn't we get it here? Her Ice Ballet originated here, was cast here and clothed here, but we could only look at it on the screen.

HEDDA HOPPER

And that's my first complaint to you, Sonja. You're on of the foreign girls to whom I take off my hat. Your sunny disposition has never soured. You've never been too important or too tired to exchange greetings with all those who have come in contact with you. You've never tried to pattern yourself after some slinking sirens who clank their emotions after them as though they had a ball and chain on leash.

Thank heaven, you've kept your slightly rounded figure, when some here look like plucked chickens. And your success leads me to believe that men prefer your type. In spite of having muscles like steel, you're soft, feminine and natural.

It's more than a mere coincidence that with the world gone mad, our greatest stars today are children, drawings, dummies. Yesterday, above the biggest theater in town, the electric sign read: "Goldwyn Follies with Charlie McCarthy." And so, in the darkest hours, people look for sunshine—the end of the rainbow. And get down to fundamental facts. Sweetness, goodness and light. I've let myself go on you, haven't I?

Sonja's house-warming was a bit delayed, because since her return she has grappled, and so has the dentist, with an impacted wisdom tooth which almost amounted to a major operation before they got the darned thing out. But the thing that worried Sonja was that she was losing the beautiful tan she got down in Florida. Oh, I forgot—I shouldn't have mentioned that State.

And now the ice is all set on stage 15 at 20th Century, and she's already trying out new skates and routines for her next picture. She, together with Harry Lousee, work out the solo part, and the ballet gets together with Bert Clark. You probably know by this time that they train dancers to skate and not the other way around.

While working, Sonja eats one good meal a day. Breakfast consists of orange juice, cooked cereal, toast and coffee. She loves coffee, as do all people who come from those cold countries. Dagmar, my faithful cook for ten years, used to make fresh coffee five times a day. Friends dropped in, not to see me, but for a cup of Dagmar's coffee. Her cookies weren't bad, either. If you don't believe me, ask Zaza Pitts and Walter Pidgeon.

"LOOKS AND LAUGHTER." The Independant Burlesque Association presents the musical production in two acts and 24 scenes featuring Amy Fong, supported by Max Coleman, Harry Bentley, Bob Ferguson, Mary Murray, Paula, Dorothy Sevier, Bill Crooks, and Harry Jackson. Dance numbers devised by Elinor Cook; staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by Art John, B. C. A. A.

Amy Fong, one of China's fair contributions to the burlesque theater, is the featured feminine star at the Gayety playhouse this week, supported by a cast of unusual artists and entertainers.

This is Miss Fong's initial appearance here this season after a successful tour of the East, and might we add that this celestial beauty has much to recommend her as an artiste of the first rank. Her gowns are much in taste with the Oriental atmosphere which is a prevailing factor in her colorful musical routines. Her beauty parades leave nothing to be desired.

The comedy moments of the revue are placed in the hands of capable Bob Ferguson, Max Coleman and Harry Bentley. Of the trio, Ferguson, it appears, has more to offer in the way of sidesplitting and original fun, although Coleman and Bentley are not far behind. Incidentally, Harry Jackson and Bill Crooks give competent performances in their straight-man characters.

May Murray and a dazzling brunette named Paula lend much beauty and charm to the attraction with their musical offerings, while Dorothy Sevier proves herself one of burlesque's better "talking women."

The "ladies of the ensemble" are pretty, shapely and show careful training in their dance routines, while the settings and lighting effects are unusually lavish.

*X WASHINGTON: MONDAY, APRIL 11, 1938 15

This Morning..

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

Charlotte, N. C., April 10.—I'm not sitting in Mindy's, I am simply trying to stir up an idea out of the day's news when I notice by the papers that the Chicago Cubs have signed up a party by the name of Jack Russell, who is a pitcher.

Now it is none of my business, for I do not choose to meddle with the affairs of other parties, but I am surprised more than somewhat to learn that the Chicago Cubs have signed up this Jack Russell, the pitcher.

Reading this, I cannot help but get the impression that the National League is not dumb like a fox. But just plain dumb like a dumbell. I have heard very often that the National League is not smart but I am amazed that the National League should be trying so hard to prove it.

In this respect I am reminded of a character by the name of Georgie The Glut who is really no glut in any way, shape or form but is called such because he is a very scrawny individual and for all I know does not treat himself to a square meal once a day. In fact, I have heard it said that Georgie is mad at his stomach and will give it no satisfaction at all. But of course that is a falsehood and I cannot believe it.

For some time Georgie has not been in evidence around Mindy's and I learn lately that there is a little matter of 90 days which he owes the State, which explains his absence almost fully. We are surprised that the Commonwealth should catch up with Georgie The Glut because Georgie is an artist in his profession, as everyone knows, and has always considered it very crude, indeed, to let himself in for any legal entanglements, which in certain cases might be very embarrassing.

• • • •

Now I am fairly positive there were certain folks, including the law, who did not like Georgie The Glut for various reasons, but you may be sure that there was general admiration for his working hours, which were from noon to 1 p. m., prompt. The opinion was held, too, in certain quarters that Georgie might have made good with the sidewalk crowd on Fifth avenue and Park, but Georgie was not exactly a big-timer, even though I repeat he was an artist in his profession.

Georgie worked the lunch-hour mobs in the cloak and suit district on Seventh and Eighth avenues, which territory you may or may not know does not exactly reek with swank and in fact has always been considered strictly as the National League for dips.

Anyway, when Georgie was in the vicinity it was more than a coincidence, I can tell you, that the button-hole makers would begin to miss such possessions as their wallets, if they were careless enough to wear such articles in their hip pockets. And very often there would be a disappearance of watches and scarf pins and other such trinkets which the cloak and suit men carry in great profusion, as you know.

• • • •

As I was saying, Georgie was an artist and very rarely did he fail to come up with nothing at all when he was really leveling against a party, but on the day in question it seems that he bungled the job somewhere and was very promptly grabbed by a large character named Finkle, who, it seems, had found a hand in his pocket which, on examination, did not prove to be his own. In fact, it was the hand of Georgie The Glut, and that was very embarrassing, indeed, for Georgie, especially when another large character in the uniform of the law took in the situation at a glance.

So Georgie was rushed to the magistrate court in due time and questioned very closely about his activities on Seventh avenue at the hour when a strange hand was found in the pocket of the aforesaid Mr. Finkle, and Georgie was maintaining all the while that it was an accident, that he did not intend to lift anything. That nothing, in fact, had been lifted, and the impression was that Georgie was making a pretty good witness for himself.

And hizzoner the magistrate was beginning to chide the court's mouthpiece for rushing a defendant into the courtroom with such woeful lack of evidence. Georgie perked up at this turn of events in his favor and expressed the desire to have this silly courtroom business over with as he was a man of many interests and could use the time for important purposes.

In fact, by way of impressing the magistrate Georgie casually glanced at his watch and murmured something about an hour to make a train.

• • • •

Now at this moment there was great buzzing between the bailiff and the court's mouthpiece and after a bit the mouthpiece addressed the court respectfully saying that something very peculiar was going on in this very courtroom because when Georgie The Glut was frisked as a formality when booked he did not have a watch among his possessions, whereas he was now looking casually at a watch.

He said also that it was perhaps more than a coincidence that he was missing his own watch and he would like to inquire if the time piece Georgie The Glut had been glancing at casually could possibly be the watch in question. If so, it was plainly marked on the back Mortimer J. Goldfarb.

Which happened to be the case, although Georgie The Glut said he could not understand it at all. But the court said it was beginning to understand and said furthermore and with great emphasis 90 days.

And so I am reminded of the National League by Georgie The Glut and vice versa. Because the National League which has been currently under suspicion of being a minor league and, in fact, nothing but a snug harbor for old American League cast-offs, is going out of it's way to prove it.

• • • •

As you may or may not know suspicion was first directed toward the National League when they began to lose World Series and All-Star games to the Americans right and left, and lately the National has been making matters worse for itself by signing up washed-up American Leaguers who seemed ready for the minors.

I mean such as Dusty Cooke and Heinie Manush and Bucky Walters and Carl Reynolds and Dick Coffman who could not hold American League jobs and are now National League stars. I am amazed that Mr. Ford Frick, the president of the National League who used to be a newspaperman himself, should permit this thing to go on because if the old American Leaguers do make good in the National, as they always seem to do, it cannot help but be a very serious reflection on the National League caliber of baseball.

The National League has been making great to-do about the pieces in the magazines of late calling it a minor league. And has been attempting to deny it most vigorously, but now the National League signs up this party named Jack Russell who is a pitcher and that just about convicts the National League because this Russell, who has been given the bums rush by four A. L. clubs, the other day was given the bums rush by Washington American League Club which needs pitchers no less than I need an excuse to wind up this mess I've gotten myself into.

Bucs Defeat Chisox, 9-2, For 3 in Row

Blanton, Tobin Allow Only 2 Hits; Latter Hits Homer.

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, Tex., April 10.—Cy Blanton and James Tobin held the Chicago White Sox to two hits today as the Pittsburgh Pirates scored their third victory in as many exhibition starts against the Hose this season. The score was 9 to 2. Mike Kreevich collected both the hits. One was made in the third, after two errors by Bill Brubaker, and scored the only Chicago runs.

The Pirates made 11 hits and all but one of their runs off Johnny Whitehead. The other came on a home run by Tobin, first man to face Sugar Cain in the sixth.

CARDS BEAT BUFFALOES.

Houston, Tex., April 10 (AP).—The Cardinals had the breaks to shade the Houston Buffaloes, 4 to 3, in an exhibition game that drew 9,500 spectators here this afternoon.

It was the eighth straight win for St. Louis. The Birds entered the final frame on the short end of a 3-to-2 count. A scratch hit, a wild pitch, a passed ball, a walk, a timely double by Pinch-Hitter Terry Moore and a long fly by Pepper Martin shoved across the tying and winning runs.

Dizzy Dean pumped the ball across with some of his old speed for three innings, allowing one hit.

INDIANS WIN, 5 TO 2.

Birmingham, Ala., April 10 (AP).—with the line-up that will take the field on opening day together for the first time this spring, the Indians today defeated Birmingham, of the Southern Association, 5 to 2.

Bob Feller worked seven rounds, being the first of the Tribe's regular hurlers to go that distance. He allowed seven hits, struck out nine and walked four.

Earl Whitehill, who finished the game, allowed only one infield hit in his two innings on the mound.

The Tribe's eleven-hit attack was paced by Bruce Campbell, who connected for a triple and two singles before turning over his rightfield duties to Jeff Heath. Lyn Lary, Ken Keltner, Rollie Hemsley and Solters each made two hits.

RED SOX SOCK REDS.

Durham, N. C., April 10 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox got off to a five-run lead in the second inning here today to defeat the Cincinnati Reds, 10 to 9.

The Reds overtook Joe Cronin's men with a one-run advantage in the final frame, but the Sox scored twice to take the game.

Pinky Higgins, Sox third sacker, drove in six runs, hit two homers and singled in the ninth, bringing in the tying and winning markers.

Dusty Cooke and Buck Jordan paced the Rhinelanders with the stick with five safeties apiece.

Augusta, Ga., April 10 (AP).—Manager Casey Stengel's problem of how to fit slugging Max West into a regular berth on his crew became easier today as Maxie's hitting led the Boston Bees in a 15-4 romp over the Augusta Tigers, of the South Atlantic League.

After Max did his stuff on three different pitchers with a pair of triplets and a homer, Stengel said he would start him at first base tomorrow in place of Elbie Fletcher, against the Senators in Gastonia, N. C. West played in rightfield today.

MACKS BEATEN.

Portsmouth, Va., April 10.—The Portsmouth Cubs, of the Piedmont League, split a two-game exhibition series with the Philadelphia Athletics, taking today's game, 9 to 6, after losing 7 to 4 yesterday.

Portsmouth tallied five runs in the sixth today, with Caster in the box for the A's. Newsome, A's shortstop, who was struck in the head yesterday by a pitched ball, was replaced by Peters, who played a good game.

Jacksonville, Fla., April 10 (AP).—There were two encouraging signs for Manager Burleigh Grimes as his Brooklyn Dodgers bid farewell to Florida for another season today with their second straight defeat of the Jacksonville Tars, this time by a score of 13 to 1.

For one thing, Van Lingle Mungo, the big fireball right-hander, showed no signs of a sore arm, as he pitched six innings and allowed the Sally Leaguers only five hits. For another, First Baseman Dolph Camilli broke a hitless streak that had extended through 22 times at

Blackhawks Nip Leafs, 2-1

Record Crowd Watches Chicago Take Lead.

By the United Press.

Chicago, April 10.—Chicago's battered Blackhawks tonight shot into the lead in the finals of the Stanley Cup play-offs by whipping the highly-favored Toronto Maple Leafs, 2 to 1, before the largest crowd ever to see a major league hockey game.

A wildly partisan crowd of 18,496 jammed the stadium to watch the bruised and bandaged Blackhawks come from behind in the second period and win the third game of the series on a long, sharply-angled shot by Doc Romnes after 15:55 of the third period.

Romnes, severely injured in the second game at Toronto, picked up a pass from Thompson and rifled the winning shot squarely past Goalie Truk Broda, who had no chance to make a stop. It bounded in and out again, but Goal Judge John McLean, of Detroit, ruled it was good.

Mush March, who had brought the puck down the ice alone, was given an assist on the scoring play.

Except for a hysterical flurry in the first minute of play, the Blackhawks played the finest hockey they have shown at home this season. Apparently out to avenge the brutal punishment handed out at Toronto by Big Red Horner of the Maple Leafs, the Hawks went after the giant defense man in the first minute and Romnes sent him to his knees with a flagrant blow with his stick.

Horner was helped off the ice and Romnes drew a minor penalty.

While he was in the box Sylvanus Apps, tall Leaf center, caught a pass from Drillon and beat Karakas for the first goal of the game, in 1:35. Bob Davidson also drew an assist.

The Blackhawks quieted down quickly but failed to score until 16:02 of the second period, when Carl Voss, apparently cut off from the goal by a mass of blue-shirted Maple Leafs, slipped a backhand shot past Broda for the tying goal. Gottselig and Jenkins, who had passed the puck around inside the blue line sparring for an opening, were credited with assists.

Chicago won the first game of the "E" series for the world championship, 3 to 1, and lost the second, 5 to 1. The fourth game will be played at the stadium Tuesday night and the fifth, if necessary, will be played in Toronto.

Jones Is 8-5 Favorite Over Abrams Tonight

Capacity House Expected to See Return Bout at Arena; First Scrap Listed for 8:30 O'Clock.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

The prizefighter and the laddie meet again tonight at Turner's Arena where Jimmy Jones, Baltimore belter, and George Abrams, youthful Washington middleweight, square off for an eight-round joust.

Upward of 2,000 fans, all the tight little battle bailiwick will accommodate, are expected to see the bout, which shaped up as one of the indoor season's prize pugilistic plums. The firs tbout it slated for 8:30 o'clock.

Largely on the strength of his fifth-round knockout of the District boy in their first meeting, plus an undeniable ability to absorb stiff punches, Jones reigns an 8-5 favorite. Abrams, while not lacking financial support, finds himself a distinct long shot for the first time in his budding career.

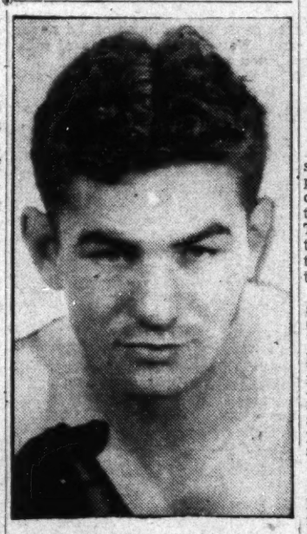
Proprietor of an impressive 17-bout winning streak until he bumped into Jones' busy mittens, Abrams must win this one to regain his lost prestige and remain in the fistic spotlight. Bigger purses for fighting better men at Griffith Stadium this summer is the stake George is fighting for. If he loses, comparative obscurity will be his lot.

Failure means a throwback to where he was a year ago when he made his professional debut. You can throw out those 17 victories, for they will be worthless in the face of two consecutive defeats at Jones' hands. He must avenge his defeat, or be relegated to the "dead duck" category in box-office parlance.

Although in better condition than he was for any previous engagement, Abrams is conceded little chance of putting the rough Baltimorean away. His Sunday punch doesn't have enough "tickle," and his lone hope is to outbox Jones, keep away from his punishing body blows, and by all means stay beyond range of his sporific right.

The lad has been working diligently with his left hand, trying to perfect a weapon that will keep Jones at his distance and also pick up a few points toward his own score. George tagged his opponent with good right-hand smashes several times in the memorable first bout and didn't feaze him. He may have found a knockout punch in two weeks, but, if so, it is the first case on record of such a wallop being developed in such a brief period.

Jones is expected to employ the same strategy he used in the initial bout, pounding away at Abrams' midriff to get his guard down, then trying for a knockout with his right. The Jewish lad's supporters contend he was flattened by a "lucky" punch, and Jimmy is anxious to show how wrong they are in this statement.



JIMMY JONES.

Jones appears to be immune from punishment at Abrams' hands, as previously noted, and will not be timid about going after his man. He'll slug from bell to bell if George wants it that way, and go in after him if he tries to stand him off with a left jab. Jones is counting on another knockout and will be trying for it from the tinkle of the first bell.

Reports of a "business" fight have been probed and found to be baseless. The local ring commission has its collective eye peeled for off-color work, and the matchmaker can ill-afford to have anything go wrong. Jones, moreover, thinks too much of his personal record and is eyeing a few lucrative bouts at the ball park himself.

An attractive supporting card has been arranged with Ray Ingram and Johnny Dube, of New York, in an eight-round semifined scrap. Abe Denner was slated to meet Ingram but injured himself Saturday. Carroll Dell and Joe Reno meet in a six, and Rusty Baker faces Buddy Thomas in a four-rounder.

Pro Gridders Adopt Rules

Make Five Laws to Aid Players and Game.

By the United Press.

Pittsburgh, April 10.—Five rules designed to give more protection to players and increase the speed of professional football were adopted today by the code committee of the National Football League.

The three most important rules were:

1. The referee shall be empowered to penalize the defensive eleven for deliberate roughing of a forward passer after the ball has left his hands.

2. Out-of-bounds kickoffs shall be put in play on the 45-yard line of the receiving team.

3. Incomplete forward passes into the end zone shall not be automatic touchbacks, except on the fourth down.

Another revision enlarged the substitute rule to permit any two players withdrawn from the game during the fourth period to return to play once before the final gun. The fifth change makes all penalties on the defending team, within the 10-yard line, one-half the distance to the goal.

The code committee, which consisted of Chairman George Halas, Chicago Bears; Steve Owen, New York Giants; Bert Bell, Philadelphia's Eagles; George (Potsy) Clark, Brooklyn Dodgers, and Earl (Curly) Lambeay, Greene Bay, recommended that league scorers next season rceord all out-of-bounds punts originating within the defensive 40-yard line.

Statistics on these punts were recommended after it was pointed out that almost every National League booter can punt out of bounds between the goal and the 20. The code committee expects to use the record next year to make another revision, in which such punts would be returned to the gridiron as touchbacks, instead of at the point they rolled out.

The new kickoff rule was made to end the practice of deliberately kicking out of bounds to prevent the possibility of a spectacular touchdown runback.

A committee spokesman said that the new substitution rule would prevent an injured man from staying in the game throughout the final quarter when he should be relieved. Others, however, saw it open the way for a dead-shot passer or kicker to be run in during the dying moments of a game in a last effort to register a touchdown or field goal.

Father and Sons Banquet Date Set

The annual fathers and sons banquet of the Brotherhood of the Washington Hebrew Congregation will be held at the Mayflower Hotel on Sunday, April 24.

Sidney B. Lust, general chairman, has called a luncheon meeting for Wednesday, April 14 at 12:30 p. m. at Harvey's Restaurant, for all the committees.

The dinner is an annual meeting place of the prominent local sports world. Already promised to attend are Cliff Battles and Charley Malone of the Washington Redskins.

Rock Creek Ginger Ale Will Hold Meeting

New and old candidates for the Rock Creek Gingerale nine are requested to report for a meeting Wednesday night at 8 p. m. at 204 Seventh street northwest.

Rock Creek is anxious to book out-of-town unlimited games, especially with Prince Georges, Ballston, Fredericksburg and Lorton, which are asked to write Manager Pete Marcinini at 204 Seventh street or call Me. 8056.

Rookie Gets Homer, Two Other Hits

10,000 Free-Admission Fans See Griffs Beat 'Farm' Club.

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Charlotte, N. C., April 10.—It happened here in Charlotte, after all these years, the Washington ball club, played a game to which the public was invited free of charge—for nothing.

The Nats stopped off here today to meet their Charlotte farm hands, and build up a little good-will for the legalization of Sunday baseball which will be voted on next month. Ten thousand fans jammed the little park, 2,000 more were turned away at the gates and the blue-noses now fear that Charlotte will have it's Sunday baseball.

It was a close ball game—for one inning. Then the Nats thumped out six runs in the second inning and coasted into a 9-to-5 victory over their minor league cousins.

However, Manager Bucky Harris could find little to gloat about at the finish. The chaps who surrendered those nine runs to Washington were three cast-off pitchers who appear years away from the big leagues—Big Owen Wright, the 6-foot-4-inch right-hander who had a brief tryout with the Nats last month; Chunky Early Wynn, who was also discussed by the Nats last month and Bucky Jacobs, the former Richmond University no-hit star who couldn't make good with the Nats last fall.

His own pitchers didn't give Harris any cause for jubilation, either. Emil Leonard, the knuckle-ball proprietor who was supposed to be moving into a regular job, was no riotous success against the class B Charlotte Club, which is managed by Calvin Griffith, adopted son of the Nats' owner.

Leonard was rapped for eight hits in the six innings he pitched and was in constant trouble despite the fact he gave up only two runs.

Ken Chase, who was supposed to improve, showed no improvement today. He pitched the last three innings, gave up only two hits, but he allowed two runs, walked a pair of batters, hit one and contributed a wild pitch to the generally hectic proceedings.

The fellow who did put himself in solid wtih Harris, though, was husky Taft Wright, the compact outfielder who rapped out three hits yesterday and three more hits today. One of his blows this afternoon was a two-bagger into the crowd and another was a high-powered home run far over the right field wall with two men on base, the feature blow of that second inning which netted the Nats six runs.

Chase had one feat to his credit despite his dreary showing. With the bases full and Bobby Estalella, the league's strikeout king at bat, Chase shoved three fast balls past the Cuban to strike him out. He retired the side on strikes in that inning.

Tomorrow the Nats hie themselves to Gastonia, 20 miles away, to resume their series with the Boston Bees in Buddy Lewis' home town. Remembering last year's fiasco when the town turned out to honor Lewis formally only to watch him make two errors, go hitless, and hurt his hand trying to field a bad hop, Gastonia folks are planning no official reception for the Nats' third-baseman this year.

Baugh Marries Edmonia Smith In Sweetwater

Sweetwater, Tex., April 10 (AP).—Sammy Baugh the Nation's highest paid professional football star, and Edmonia Smith, his college sweetheart, were married today in a quiet ceremony at the home of the bride's parents.

There were no attendants and no music.

The ceremony was read by the bride's father, Dr. Gary L. Smith, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church here for 11 years.

The bride was dressed in navy blue net with a bolero jacket. They left immediately for Columbus, Ohio, where Baugh will play baseball this season with the Columbus Redbirds.

Frank Walsh May Seek Congressional Pro Job

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Frank Walsh, nationally known golf professional from Chicago, visited Wiffy Cox yesterday and today may add his name to the 50-odd applicants of the Congressional Country Club professional post. Walsh will play in the Middle Atlantic pro-amateur event at Belle Haven today.

FRANK WALSH.

The towering mid-western professional will stay in town until Wednesday. He will go to New York from here on business and compete in the Metropolitan Open in May. Playing as unattached at the present, he will return to Chicago in time for the National P. G. A. qualifications.

Walsh did not come to the city expressly to apply for the Congressional position but he may confer with the members of the committee selected to pick the new professional some time today. Theodore S. Grape, president of the club and head of the eight members named to pick the new pro, said last night the applications were still open and would be until the next meeting tomorrow night. Roland MacKenzie's successor may be selected in the Tuesday meeting.

Walsh practiced for two hours yesterday at Kenwood.

He won nearly $1,000 in the Southern winter tournaments, including his best showing in the Hollywood Open where he tied for fourth place.

Walsh was tied with Ed Dudley for the lead in the National Open at Oakland Hills last year after two rounds of 70 but fell to 78 in the third round and finished with a 295 total.

Another visitor to Kenwood was Art Brown, general manager of the Shawnee on the Delaware Country Club, scene of the 1938 P. G. A. championship. Brown is on his way to the Pennsylvania course and stopped in town on a short visit. He also practiced over the River road course.

The lucky number in the Indian Spring Blind Bogey was 74 with four tying for the top prizes. D. E. De Veau had 84-10—74, W. D. Howell, 91-17—74; J. Livingston,

Giants Are Cinch, Says Stoneham; Wants Chance to Tear Yanks Apart

By the United Press.

New York, April 10.—Horace Stoneham, youngest and one of the most successful major league club owners, today forecast another "5-cent World Series" between the Giants and Yankees in October.

Young Stoneham, who at 34 has the only perfect club owner record with two penants in the two years since he inherited the Giants from his father, the late Charles A. Stoneham, said he hoped the Yankees wouldn't fail the Giants this time.

"It's a cinch for the Giants to win their third straight pennant," predicted Stoneham as he sat in an easy chair at the New York Athletic Club.

"But those Yankees have me worried a little bit. I think they'll win all right, but I want them to win by 15 or 20 games. I want them to be the greatest team in baseball. I want them to be super, colossal and tremendous. They can't get too good for me. Because the Giants are going to take them apart this fall. And then we'll bring in some of these wise boys who are asking if the National League is a new minor league and see what they have to say."

One of the most rabid baseball fans in the business, Stoneham can't get over the fact that the Yankees gave his Giants a good shellacking in the past two World Series. It's still a nightmare to him.

"In 1936 when they beat us, the Yanks had a better club," said Stoneham, "but they didn't last October even though they gave us a worse licking. A couple of bad breaks in the first game ruined us. But we'll get our chance this fall to make up for that—if those Yankees don't let us down."

Stoneham laughed at the controversy now raging about the relative strength of the two leagues.

"Why, everyone compares the Yankees and the other 15 clubs," he said. "Not the American League and the National League. But this talk will help the National League. Our players are plenty hot about it. We'll show 'em."

Stoneham whose heroes as a kid were giant stars of the past—Merkle, Mathewson, Dolin, Meyers, Doyle and all the rest—was so enthusiastic about John J. McGraw's team that his father bought the club for "his boy."

"We've got the best team in the National League," said Stoneham. "It's sound defensively. Our attack is well-balanced and we have the greatest manager in baseball. They say we never win games, that the other side always beats themselves. Well, isn't that a tribute to Bill Terry.

"The Cubs will furnish our toughest opposition but we'll beat 'em out as we have the last two years. If the Cardinals are lucky they can make trouble but they have a lot of weak gaps. Their infield isn't strong on the left side, and their catching is a problem. Pittsburgh, well is just Pittsburgh. I look for Cincinnati and Brooklyn to battle it out for fifth place. The Reds are a very much improved team."

"What would happen if the Giants didn't win the pennant," Stoneham was asked. He said in a low voice, "I'd cry."

Walter Haight

From a close friend of Earle Sande I have received an interesting inside story on the great winter campaign of Stagehand.

HAIGHT.

Maxwell Howard's colt is due to arrive at Churchill Downs today to prepare for his crack at the Kentucky Derby. In the same car, as a traveling companion of Stagehand, is his full brother, Sceneshifter. When these two horses were shipped to California last December, Sceneshifter was the big shot of the pair and Stagehand was the traveling companion.

It is well known that Sceneshifter and Stagehand are full brothers, while it is generally believed that Howard purchased Sceneshifter and Fencing from Joseph B. Widener and that, on Sande's recommendation, a deal was made for Stagehand. My informant tells me that Howard bought the three at the same time and that Stagehand was tossed in for good measure when Howard put $17,500 on the line.

Howard believed Fencing to be the best of the group. However, Sceneshifter developed into a shifty colt in Florida during the 1936-1937 season and Howard decided to place his big stake hopes in that son of Sickle. Sceneshifter ran third in the Kentucky Derby, he was out of the money in the Preakness and he ran second in the Belmont. Of course, the winner in all three of these races was War Admiral. In fact, if War Admiral had not been in circulation. Sceneshifter might have been the top 3-year-old of the year.

• • • •

At the end of the season, knowing that Howard was in favor of winter racing, Trainer Sande cornered his boss about plans for the winter months. Inasmuch as Howard had a winter home in Florida, Sande naturally believed that he would want to race his horses there. In addition, Howard is a good friend of Joseph E. Widener, president of Hialeah Park and the man who put him in the horse business by selling him the three horses.

What Howard told Sande was an earful. Of course, I haven't the exact words but it went something like this, "Listen, Earl, I'm tired of having my horses chase War Admiral. Wherever we have raced, Sceneshifter has done well, but he's always had to chase that darn War Admiral. That colt is poison to us. I'll tell you where to race this winter. You race my horses as far away from that War Admiral as you can. If War Admiral goes to California, you take Sceneshifter to Florida. I don't want any part of War Admiral any more."

• • • •

When it was definitely determined that War Admiral was headed for Florida, Sande packed his horses and shipped them to California. Howard went to Florida for the winter.

Out on the West Coast, Sceneshifter won a prep race for the Santa Anita Handicap, but that wasn't the reason that Sande was wearing a big grin. The former jockey had come to realize that Stagehand was developing into a fine distance horse. Sande watched him work and finally reported to Owner Howard that the colt had a good chance of winning the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby. Stagehand did just that, defeating Dauber and Sun Egret among others.

Of course, Sceneshifter was the stable's chief reliance in the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap. At the time his entry was made, Sande had also nominated Stagehand. Due to his poor record, plus the fact that he was a 3-year-old, Stagehand was assigned only 100 pounds, the weights being released before the Santa Anita Derby.

• • • •

With the big race a week away, Sande called Howard on the telephone.

"Mr. Howard, I believe I'll start Stagehand as well as Sceneshifter in the $100,000 race. But I thought I had better get in touch with you first. Here's the dope: When Stagehand was given 100 pounds, the handicapper did not know he was good enough to have a chance. Since we won the derby, Stagehand probably never will get in another race at 100 pounds," Sande told the owner. "Now you know there's a possibility of knocking Stagehand out by trying to beat older horses. We might make him unfit for the Kentucky Derby. Are you willing to take a chance?"

"Looks like you've been doing all right,5" came back Howard. "Just go right on using your own judgment, but make sure that War Admiral isn't going to start."

Of course, Stagehand won the $100,000 Santa Anita, hanging that nose defeat on Seabiscuit. But for Howard's hunch, both Stagehand and Sceneshifter might have spent the winter in Florida chasing War Admiral.

Trapshoot Wednesday At Meadow Lark Club

Keyser, W. Va., April 10.—The Meadow Lark Gun Club will hold its first registered trapshoot of the season Wednesday on its traps near Keyser on the New Creek road. The program will consist of 100 16-yard targets, 50 handicap targets and 25 pairs of doubles. Meadow Lark will be the scene of the West Virginia State championship shoot May 13 and 14.

Schmeling's Tune-up Due On Saturday

Agriculture Tops UFWA Softballers

The second Sunday of play of the UFWA Softball League found Agriculture leading the league with two victories. The Agriculture team trounced the Securities and Exchange Commission to the tune of 7-2 in a game noted by the outstanding batting of Heston and Shikar. Batteries for Agriculture were Long, pitcher, and Matthews, catcher. Altman caught the pitching of Wolfe for SEC.

Behind Derrickson's tight pitching Social Security beat Labor, 8-2. Gruber was behind the bat. Dauber was on the mound for Labor and Dodd caught. Lopes and Pinnix delivered three hits apiece for the SS team.

Time Out! BY CHET SMITH

Dear Al: Selections at Bowie.

Aneroid was assigned top weight in the Southern Maryland Handicap, closing-day feature at this track next Thursday. John A. Manfuso's stake horse was given 129 pounds, but it is unlikely that he will go to the post. Due to the continued off-condition of the track, Aneroid has been unable to get in sufficient work. Should the course dry out the first part of the week, Aneroid will be given a trial. However, his handlers probably will be reluctant to start him with the heavy impost, preferring to wait for his stake engagements at Havre de Grace. I have a feeling that the high-weight scale being used at Bowie is one of the contributing factors to the falling off of the wagering. Standout horses are carrying 122 to 126 pounds and winning with the crushing assignments because their opponents are correspondingly heavily weighted. However, the bettors hesitate to toss in the big money on those horses. Small fields and short prices also have been factors in cutting down the wagering. Rather than take even money or less, many customers are keeping their cash in their pockets. There are plenty of horses stabled at Bowie. For one reason or another the handlers just won't put them in action. Some say their charges have not reached form; others are giving their horses a rest after heavy winter campaigning. I'm in favor of charging those nonstarting stables a big rental. Why should they use Bowie for a horse hotel? Many of the Florida stables seem to have come to the track merely to pass away the time before shipping on to New York, New England and other points. In the meanwhile, the half-mile horses, whose owners generally have a hard time getting stalls at the major Maryland track, are the backbone of practically every program. BILL.

First race—Prince Gale turned on the heat in the stretch last out and closed like the wind. Needs only to get a good ride to turn back this field. Bold Lad is better than that last. Scoria, a first time starter, is reported to be a good one.

Second race—My Surprise turned in a fine effort here and, despite the crushing weight assignment, I'm going to string along. Guinea Doric, winner of five races last year, is newcomer hereabouts but is dangerous. Paplay has good mud form and may be close.

Third race—Dizzy Dame gets in action here with only 105 pounds. She had poor racing luck last out and with clear sailing should take down the chief award. Jadaan closed gamely to be second last week. Irene's Bob is improved and may be hard to defeat.

Fourth race—Oddesa Boy was slow to get under way in that most recent start. In the stretch he was running over horses. Better handling in the early running may bring this one a set of brackets. Playmore lost a tough one here last week. Should improve off that effort. Ross to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Brown Moth gave a creditable performance in his first outing of the year. Shapes up well in this company and I'm going to string along. Surburbanite and The Millsdale entry of Ron and Yarn Sox to complette the money bracket.

Sixth race—Ladino gave every indication of being at tops last out. I expect the word to be given for this race. Parity is good now but the weight shift favors the top one. Sand Cloud likes the course and should be prominent.

Seventh race—Royal Tread may make it three in a row in this field. Jim John couldn't handle that weight last week but should go well with the lighter assignment. Infilee is too fit to disregard entirely.

Best bet—Ladino.

Sports in Florida Bring $1,969,753

Miami, Fla., April 10 (U.P.).—Horse racing, dog racing and Jai-Alai—sports featuring Florida's tourist program—netted the State $1,969,753 during the 1937-38 season, an increase of 7.4 per cent over the preceding season, the State Racing Association reported tonight.

The revenue was the State's share of money wagered at two horse tracks, ten dog tracks and a Jai-Alai fronton, admission and occupational taxes. It was $136,000 above the 1936-37 season.

The two horse racing plants—Hialeah and Tropical parks—produced $1,200,466 in revenue to the State, dog tracks $718,488, and Jai-Alai, a Spanish game, $33,564.

The three sports, among the greatest drawing cards of the Florida tourist season, had an attendance of 2,401,378, an increase of 70,434 over last year. Wagering totaled $54,047,114, topping the previous season by almost $4,000,000.

3 Inter-High Games Head Week's Card

Central Meets G. U. Today; Anacostia Makes Debut Tomorrow.

Besides three interhigh baseball games scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, there are several other scholastic activities on the sports card that may prove to be very attractive to followers of high school competition.

Central, which does not participate in the interhigh series until April 26, has a very busy week. Coach Jack Ray's nine will meet Georgetown Prep today at 3:30 on the Garrett Park Field. And at the same time, Washington and Lee engages Falls Church at Ballston, Va., in the only two baseball games on Monday's program.

Tomorrow Anacostia, latest to join the interhigh fold, will stack up against Woodrow Wilson on the Eastern field at 315. The tilt will open the interhigh series officially since the inaugural double-header was postponed due to inclement weather. Four other scraps will round out the day as Central entertains Briarly Military Academy, Washington and Lee plays host to Eastern, Saint Albans meets Episcopal at Alexandria, and Montgomery Blair entertains Charlotte Hall. All games are scheduled for 3:30.

Roosevelt against Eastern at Roosevelt, Western against Tech at Western, leads the Wednesday order of events. Both of these interhigh games will start at 2:15. On the same day Bethesda-Chevy Chase plays the Gaithersburg nine at Garrett Park at 3:30 while a triangular meet with Roosevelt, Wilson and Gonzaga participating gets underway at 4 p. m.

On Thursday, Central travels to Fredericksburg in an attempt to chalk up a baseball win. Wilson High meets Landon on the Bethesda diamond while Montgomery Blair journeys to New Jersey for a tussle with the South River High School nine. The Wilson-Landon game is scheduled to start at 3:30. Also on the calendar will be a dual track meet between Tech and Episcopal at Alexandria.

With Easter vacation holding the spotlight on the last two days of the week, scholastic activities bog down quite a bit. No high school events are listed for Friday, but on Saturday Episcopal plays the Virginia Episcopal nine on the Alexandria field at 2:30. A tennis team from this same Episcopal school entertains the University of Virginia Freshmen at the same time.

The Punch Line . . .

By Lewis F. Atchison.

The town's No. 1 wrestling addict, strangely enough, is Joe Turner, the gent responsible for all the commotion up on W street every Thursday night. A retired muscle-man himself, the maestro hasn't missed a main event since graduating from the 30-minute preliminary class and manages to catch most of the prelims.

Joe was a topliner about the time Rob Roy Mackey and his bear were beginning to fade from the picture. The bear, we are reliably informed, claimed the District championship, and Rob claimed he could throw Bruin. Mackey did well enough until an irate fan discovered he was bribing the animal with a bag of peanuts.

But, skipping his early days, Turner nutured the game and brought it along from a side-attraction at burlesque shows to its present high estate, but it was a long, hard struggle. He recalled the first show he staged at the auditorium, the other day, when the rental fee was $280 and the gross receipts $230. Wrestling kept the red flag off the auditorium—a great civic enterprise that turned out to be a white elephant, and in the end made money for the place.

Jim Londos, who headlines Thursday night's program at the Arena, drew the biggest gate in wrestling history, locally, at the cavernous building over on New York avenue—8,000 potatoes. Police stopped them from peddling standing room. That was the night Turner arrived around 8 o'clock and and found a mob milling around the doorway

A Full House.

"Open up them doors," he shouted at George King. "Open 'em up and let's get some of these people inside." He almost collapsed when King shouted back, "We can't get any more in—fire regulations. . . ."

That's a night George King will long remember. He and Lester Potar were to bring the ticket and cash boxes to headquarters in the Annapolis Hotel, Potar carrying the cash box. When they arrived, King axed for it, and got a blank stare. Potar thought George had it, then remembered putting it down on the running board of their auto. New York avenue, at the time, was torn up for sewerage repairs, but the box wasn't in a ditch where they hoped to find it. It hadn't budged from the running board.

One of the greatest strokes of luck Turner experienced happened about six years ago when Dick Shikat and Jack Taylor were booked for the feature of an indoor show. This was before they had the auditorium, and it was a good box-office attraction. Turner, unwilling to gamble on the late October weather and use the ball park.

Thought Him Crazy.

Clark Griffith assented after much pleading and coaxing. He thought Turner was plumb crazy, and didn't want to put the ground crew to the trouble of putting up the ring. George Washington's football team was using the park for practice at the time, and the afternoon of the match was so warm the boys played in light gear. Shikat worked out with them in trunks—nothing more.

To make a long story longer, the bout was staged under midsummer conditions with a full moon in the bargain. The next night, Friday, George Washington played a football game—in a driving snowstorm.

If you're looking for Turner any wrestling night at the Arena don't inquire at the box office. He's not in there counting the receipts, but in the dressing room gossiping with the boys or in a ringside pew watching a match. Is wrestling on the level? Well, watch Uncle Joe sometime. If it isn't he takes a lot of unnecessary punishment—self-inflicted.

Mr. Mathew Twomey, the one-man oratorical contest, soon will have the most populous fight stable in this territory, what with a string of amateurs preparing to turn professional under his colors. Willie Feary heads the list, but there are some other good ones.

Steve Thompson, the "Smilin' Slugger," will join the paid ranks soon and should go well. Steve is a middleweight, and when fighting as an amateur scored over "Bobo" Harris, reigning District middleweight champion; Mike Lombardo, formerly of Maryland, and Bobby Schwartz, who copped the eastern light-heavyweight title last year. He's a good, strong boy and should make his mark in the game.

Steve's brother, Harry, another 135-pounder, is also figuring on a comeback after several year's absence from the battle-pit. He's had five pro fights, won the first four and had his jaw broken by Kid Egypt, a hungry out-of-towner, in the fifth, and decided to hang up the gloves.

Bob Mathias, Eastern welterweight king last year, also is training with the old gang, and while he has no immediate intention of fighting for the filthy lucre, it's a 5-1 wager he turns pro sooner or later.

Nay Palmer, a veteran of some 30 pro bouts, also is planning a comeback at the ripe old age of 22, and also happens to be a lightweight. He has a lot of foot and is a fairly good puncher. If this keeps up it will not be long before Twomey can stage his own lightweight elimination tournament.

Murray Kanner, incidentally, would like to get a shot at Maynard Daniels.

It begins to look as though Joey Archibald, who fights only handpicked opponents, will not appear here again until—and if, he opposes Escobar at the ball park. The little Providence gamester—a veritable tiger against a man he knows he can whip, seems to be another Ray Miller, a lightweight who campaigned about 11 years ago.

A native New Yorker, Miller was imported to Detroit for a semifinal bout, but substituted in the main event when one of the principals was forced out by a training injury. He fought Lope Tenorio and kayoed him in two. He went on to flatten Jimmy McLarnin, then a newcomer, in eight, and whipped a host of others.

He was brought back to New York for a return match with comeback after several years' about of him. He tried a couple of other bouts there and flopped in them. Finally, he returned to Detroit and regained his winning ways. He was a sensation in Motor City, but couldn't win with a blackjack in foreign rings. Maybe Washington has the same effect on Archibald.

In This Corner

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

New York, April 10.—Wilbur Shaw says it with a smile, and you might think he was kidding, if you didn't know Wilbur. But when he predicts that he will repeat for victory in the Indianapolis Speedway classic on Decoration Day, you know he means it—despite his grin, and the jesting lilt in his voice.

No driver ever won this blue ribbon event of the thunder-chariots twice in succession but little Wilbur believes he will. Because he's got plenty of confidence in his "iron goat" and in his own driving ability. He's a modest chap; doesn't go around bragging. But he tells you frankly he figures he should turn the trick—if nothing happens.

"If nothing happens!" That qualification covers a multitude of mishaps. No one knows it better than the home town pilot who won the Indianapolis 500-mile merry-go-round last year in record-shattering time. Wilbur has been in 200 racing accidents during his 15-year career.

• • • •

Wilbur has been cracked up plenty, but you'd never dream of it to look at him. You'd never peg him as king of the roaring saucer. He's a dapper little fellow with light brown hair and a weak Charlie Chaplin mustache. Fair-skinned and immaculate, he looks like a salesman of some sort.

And salesman he is. This 35-year-old Indiana "goat" rider sells speed and thrills. He sold me on the idea that the next Speedway tilt will be the fastest and most hazardous in history. He figures that the Decoration Day winner will average about 118 miles an hour for the 500 miles. Last year Wilbur set a new record for the race at 113.58 miles an hour.

"But this time," he says, "the drivers will be permitted to use racing fuel instead of stock gasoline as in the past. Racing fuel has more kick and more speed. We'll really be going to town out there this time. And the faster you go, the greater the danger. All records should be smacked over this time."

I was talking to Shaw in his hotel room. He came here for the annual Speedway dinner, held Friday night at Dinty Moore's tavern.

I asked him, "At what time during last year's race did you figure you were the winner?"

He grinned and replied: "I figured I was the winner 384 days before the race—right after I almost won it in '36. I was ahead for 400 miles in '36, then the hood on my goat came loose and I lost out. But I knew I had a car that could win, if nothing happened."

"What kind of a car was that?"

"It's one I built myself before the '36 race. I built it around a four-cylinder, 255-cubic-inch Offenhauser engine. It's a grand crate, yelow and streamlined."

• • • •

When his "iron goat" flashed across the finish last year, two seconds ahead of Ralph Hepburn, Wilbur had achieved his first Speedway virtoy, although he had driven in nine previous classics.

"It certainly was the biggest moment of my life, because I was born and raised in Indianapolis," he said. "Naturally I got the racing bug in my blood early. And at 19 I talked a prominent man into building me a car. I'd been aiming at a Speedway win ever since—even in the early days, when I was just a dirt track driver."

Yes, Wilbur is married to a pretty brunette whom he calls "Boots." They've been married nine years but have no children. Wilbur says, "They'll come after I retire." Does his wife mind Wilbur's racing? No—she's a great racing enthusiast and is happy that he's in a profession that he loves.

• • • •

Has Shaw seen any great change in Indianapolis racing since he has been driving there?

"Yes," in the old days a fellow could come right straight from the dirt tracks and get into the race if he could qualify in the time trials. But not any more. Every new driver has to display his ability three weeks before a board of five examiners. If they're not convinced that he's ready for the Speedway, he can't even go into the time trials. That's a protection for the young driver and for the other drivers in the race. Accidents hurt the game. And with greater speeds nowadays, you've got to have expert drivers on the track—men who can use their noodles as well as the heavy foot."

Frozen Gloves!

King Island Boys Set for Eskimo Meet.

King Island, Alaska, April 10 (AP). Father Bernard Hubbard, "Padre of the Glaciers," announced today the first annual "frozen gloves" amateur boxing tournament will open April 14.

The ring show, to last three days, will be a feature of Father Hubbard's drive to raise the health level of Eskimo children by physical culture, rather than medicine.

Recall Wins Chevy Chase Show Title

Charles Carrico's Horse Ties With Light for Reserve Champion.

Horses owned by Charles Carrico, well-known Maryland sportsman, dominated the semiannual Chevy Chase Horse Show held yesterday before a colorful crowd of more than 500 fans on East-West highway.

Carrico's Recall won the show championship and his Hunger Marcher tied for the reserve championship with U. S. Randle's Light but lost the ribbon on the toss of a coin.

One of the surprises of the show, which was packed with superb horsemanship, was the victory of Mrs. John Burns' Real Money in the Sky Scraper, the final event on the program. Her entry won the blue ribbon over Hunger Marcher and Randle's Light, the co-favorites.

Randle entries swept all the ribbons in the class for hunters when Randle's Pride, Randle's Find and Randle's Light placed in that order.

Recall built up its winning margin by taking a blue ribbon in the class for working hunters and finishing second in the classes for hunter hacks and handy hunters.

The touch-and-out event was won by Norman Clark's Midnight. Fred Hughes rode his Black Caddy into second position and third place went to Mrs. John Burns' Real Money.

Saddle ponies—Won by Rathburn's Rascal (Dean Rathburn, Jr.); second, Pinto (Shelly Warren); third, Janny (Jimmy Edelblut).

Pony jumping—Won by Princess (Bud Pumphrey); second, Trotter (Hubert Klinepeter); third, Beauty (Bernard Magill).

Junior saddle—Won by Golden Glow (Eddie Talbot); second, Kitty Vee (Mary Jackson); third, Wally (Newman Marsh).

Handicap jumping—Won by Hunger Marcher (Charles Carrico); second, High Boy (E. S. Holloway); third, Randle's Find (U. S. Randle).

Road hacks—Won by Randle's Light (U. S. Randle); second, Recall (Charles Carrico); third, Governor (U. S. Randle).

Working hunters—Won by Recall (Charles Carrico); second, Gangway (Col. Stanley entry); third, Hunger Marcher (Charles Carrico).

Intercollegiate hack—Won by Catalan Blue (Fred Hughes); second, Sun Die (Frank Christmas); third, Golden Glow (Eddie Talbot).

Hunter hacks—Won by Randle's Light (U. S. Randle); second, Recall (Charles Carrico); third, God o' War (Lieut. John Pugh).

Intercollegiate jumping—Won by Catherine Stone (Mickey Magill); second, Real Money (Miss Donnelly); third, Black Caddy (Fred Hughes).

Hunters—Won by Randle's Pride (U. S. Randle); second, Randle's Find (U. S. Randle); third, Randle's Light (U. S. Randle).

Handy hunters—Won by Head Rock (Fenton Fadeley); second, Recall (Charles Carrico); third, Hunger Marcher (Charles Carrico).

Skyscraper—Won by Real Money (Mrs. John Burns); second, Hunger Marcher (Charles Carrico); third, Randle's Light (U. S. Randle).

North-South Net Amateurs to Open Title Play Today

By the Associated Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., April 10.—The twentieth annual North and South tennis tournament will begin here tomorrow, with all hands paying their own way and playing for glory and plate. It will be the first "no expense account" amateur tennis tourney at Pinehurst.

Approximately 30 amateurs will compete in the men's and women's singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles. College tennis players will make up the larger part of the field, with students entered from North Carolina, Duke, North Carolina State, Pennsylvania and Presbyterian College.

Playing against the collegiate talent will be a few old-timers of American tennis, including Gilbert M. Hall, of New York, the defending champion in the men's singles; Fred (Pop) Baggs, a veteran of the North and South tournament, and a number of players from the Carolinas.

Pinehurst's first professional tournament will start on April 18, with Karl Kozeluh, the National Open champion; George Lott and possibly Vincent Richards, as favorites in a singles contest tournament for a purse of $2,000.

Jacobs, Vacturoff Added to Mat Card

Man Mountain Jacobs, a 300-pounder, and Ivan Vacturoff who pleased by winning efforts in last week's show were signed yesterday for a semifinal to support Jim Londos and Dr. John Murphy on Thursday's card.

Londos, recognized as international champion, holds a decision over Dr. John, the dropkick artist, in their only previous meeting but Murphy envisions an upset. He points to his impressive victory over Gino Martinelli last week as proof that he is ready for the formidable Greek.

Venzke Accepts A Special Race With Cunningham

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, April 10.—Gene Venzke, University of Pennsylvania's greatest miler, has accepted an invitation to meet Glen Cunningham in a special mile race on April 30, the second day of the Penn relay carnival.

H. Jamison Swartz, manager of the meet, said Venzke, the first athlete to run an indoor mile in 4:10, had not broken training since the close of the indoor season and hopes to score a victory over his nemesis in the past six track seasons.

July 9 Race For $100,000 Is Planned

Suffolk Downs Head Says Event Would Create New Vogue.

Boston, April 10 (AP).—Charles F. Adams, chairman of the board of Suffolk Downs, tonight said that if owners of the horses were willing, his track would put on a $100,000 race on July 9 that would create a new vogue in the sport.

He proposed no entrance or nomination fee be charged. Starters selected by a board of outstanding handicappers and racing secretaries would include winners of the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Massachusetts Handicap, and outstanding older horses. The latter would include War Admiral and Seabiscuit, tentatively scheduled to meet in a $100,000 match race at Belmont Park in late September.

"If the owners are willing," said Adams, "we will go through with this race."

"Match races, even at scale weights, have accomplished little in the past," he explained. "There is no question but that if the proposed match race between War Admiral and Seabiscuit is run, their owners will point their charges for this one event, and the ambitious programs provided by both Eastern and Western tracks with the intention of attracting the two outstanding stars will suffer accordingly."

Such a race would be the second richest in the world, with only the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap richer.

Adams said he had in mind a weight-for age event, the distance to be decided later. He said the Eastern Racing Association, which operates Suffolk Downs, would guarantee the purse with any profits derived to be given to the Eastern Horse Club, Inc., socially prominent group of Massachusetts horse lovers which formerly operated steeplechase meetings at the country club, in Brookline.

Adams' conditions would require at least six starters and no more than 12. The winner would receive $70,000, with $12,500 going to second place, $5,000 to third and $2,500 to fourth. Another novelty would be the award of $5,000 to the winning trainer, $2,000 to the second winner and $1,000 to third. The winning jockey also would gain $1,500 with the second taking $500.

Navy Faces Busy Week

Baseball, Crew, Golf and Fencing Are Carded.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, April 10.—Navy's winter sports end this week with its participation in the finals of the Intercollegiate Fencing Association at New York Friday and Saturday, and, coincidentally, spring sports strike their stride.

The only midweek attraction is the baseball game on Wednesday with Virginia Poly, but on Saturday, with varsity rowing and golf and several plebe teams making their starts, Navy athletes will have a busy afternoon.

Navy fencers have not been beaten or tied this season and have defeated a dozen college and club teams. It is not a team of stars, but balanced with all weapons—foils, epee and saber.

New York University is defending champion, and Yale, with several stars, may make a strike, though Navy has defeated it twice this season.

Navy probably will have Shirley, W. R. Glennon and De Poix in the foils; Shaw, Foley and P. T. Glennon in the epee, while the saber team will be picked from Campo, Rawie, Hedgecock and Dare.

The college rowing season will be opened by the races between the varsity and junior-varsity crews of Navy and Princeton, on the Severn. With all the members of last year's eight on hand, Coach Walsh has picked a varsity with only half of the veterans included. Tom Walker, stroke of last year's jayvee crew, is setting the pace for the varsity this season.

It will be something of a Princeton day on Saturday, as the Middies meet the Tigers also in lacrosse and tennis. Princeton, cochampion in lacrosse with Maryland last year, won from the Navy, 5 to 4, and the latter team, with a good showing against Dartmouth and Harvard, will have its first real test.

The nine will meet the University of Michigan in one of the few intersectional contests the Navy engages in this year, and golf with the University of Virginia ends the varsity program.

The B squad lacrosse team will meet the University of Virginia, beginners in that sport this season and the B nine opens against the Democratic Club, of Baltimore. The plebes also will open their diamond season, meeting Baltimore City College.

Buxby Is Beaten In Atlanta Play

Atlanta, April 10 (AP).—Davy Jones, big Atlantan once ranked tenth nationally, scored the first upset of the Atlanta Invitational Tennis Tournament today by defeating Martin Buxby, of Miami, Fla., 6—2, 6—2, in a second-round match.

Buxby is ranked sixteenth nationally and fifth seeded here.

Wayne Sabin, Los Angeles, defending titlist, advanced by default of Red Hill, Atlanta. Other second-round results:

Bernie Coughlan, Los Angeles, defeated Gus Ganzenmuller, New York, 7—5, 4—6, 6—4.

Harris Everett, Jacksonville, Fla., defeated Dr. Kels Boland, Atlanta, 5—7, 6—3, 8—6.

Tunney Favors Uhlan

Retired Champion Likes Schmeling Because of His 'Superior Equilibrium;' Says Louis Too Shaky.

New York, April 10.—Gene Tunney likes Max Schmeling's chances of beating Joe Louis again, in this year's fistic piece de resistance, because of the German schlager's "superior equilibrium."

Gentleman Gene had a little difficulty making himself heard, above the tumult and argument of the Indianapolis speedway's annual soiree here, but demonstrated he has not lost his powers of concentration by reason of ten years' absence from the ring.

TUNNEY.

SCHMELING.

"Schmeling isn't the two-handed hitter that Louis is," explained the retired heavyweight king, "but he wastes fewer shots, especially with his right hand, and he has greater ability to keep his poise and his head under fire.

"Louis has shown that he becomes befuddled quickly, when hurt; that he loses balance quickly.

"Schmeling, on the other hand, knows more about what to do for himself when the going gets tough. He not only is smarter and more resourceful but he has superior equilibrium.

"Even on the night he was knocked out by Max Baer I was amazed by Schmeling's ability to stand up under fire—in another word, equilibrium."

Tunney concedes the likelihood that both Louis and Schmeling will fight cautiously, waiting for the breaks.

"Louis will not take chances because he knows what happened to him the last time they fought. Schmeling, naturally cautious until he finds an opening, will have greater respect for the champion's punches. The fact is that Max didn't take many chances the last time they fought. He is instinctively methodical."

"What part will conditioning play in the outcome?" I asked Gene. "Don't you think Louis, after two years' additional experience, will be harder to stop?"

"Possibly," he conceded. "If Louis didn't learn a lesson from their last fight, he never will. However, I consider Schmeling to be in his physical and fighting prime. His maturity, combined with his ability to concentrate and keep in fine condition, will be in his favor."

Tunney smiled at the suggestion of Jack Dempsey that he (Tunney) give his version of the celebrated "long count" battle of Chicago for the next issue of Dempsey's new sports magazine.

"The only thing Jack's agents tried to get from me for the first issue was an advertisement," remarked the chairman of the board of a distilling company.

Match Race Is Opposed

Westchester Head May Buck Seabiscuit Race.

New York, April 10 (AP).—The New York Sun said today that C. V. Whitney, vice president of the Westchester Racing Association, probably would oppose the suggested $100,000 match race between Samuel Riddle's War Admiral and Charles S. Howard's Seabiscuit, slated for Belmont Park in the fall.

The Sun said it was learned from associates close to Whitney that he is "unalterably opposed" to match races and "extravagant purses" and pointed out that since his family and that of the Vanderbilts own controlling stock in Belmont Park, Whitney's voice is "almost certain" to decide the matter. The Westchester Racing Association operates Belmont Park.

Whitney has been on a fishing trip off the Bahamas and could not be reached immediately for comment. His approval apparently is all that is needed to make the race a reality.

The two owners already have come to general agreement on terms for the race which would be at a mile and a quarter under weight-for-age conditions. First suggested by Herbert Bayard Swope, chairman of the New York State Racing Commission, who has conducted all the preliminary negotiations, the race already has been approved, in principle, by Joseph E. Widener, president of the Westchester Association.

Yanks Rated 7-10; Giants Figured 8-5

Broadway Jack Doyle Gives Latest Dope; Nats 30-1.

New York, April 10 (AP).—Broadway Jack Doyle, the betting man, today installed the New York Yankees and Giants as favorites, respectively, to win the American and National League penant for the third straight year.

The Yankees, even money choice last year, were rated odds-on favorites, at 7 to 10, despite uncertainty as to when Joe DiMaggio will sign and the poor spring showing of the world champions. The Giants, rated third in Doyle's book a year ago, were reported at 8 to 5.

Doyle's figures, as follows, forecast a three-club race in each circuit:

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

N. Y. Yankees....	1-10	Out.	Out.
Detroit	3	7-10	2-5
Cleveland	3	7-10	2-5
Chicago	3	3	1
Boston	20	6	3
Washington	30	10	4
Philadelphia	75	30	15

Wins Hockey Title.

Fall River, Mass., April 10 (AP).—Ponta Degadas, of this city, won the Eastern Amateur Soccer Championship by defeating St. Gerard's, of Baltimore, 2-0, at Bigberry Stadium today. Mackie Almeida and Chick Cwikla scored during the second half. The Pontas will meet the winner of the Pittsburgh Heidleberg-Cleveland Slavia Western final in the playoff for the National Amateur Soccer title.

ARMY AND NAVY.

The Burton brothers conducted a pair of blind bogeys at the Service Club over the week-end, trying to get the members handicaps adjusted for the season.

Capt. Balcar, Dr. A. H. Yando and Ralph Bogart tied for the first prize in No. 1 tourney at 74, with Capt. L. E. Edwards and Commander Oldendorf next with net 71 and 72, respectively.

The second event also ended in a tie, between Col. A. D. Surles and Dr. C. G. McCormick at 73, with three knotted in third place with net 81's, J. A. Stevens, jr., Commander Pennoyer and Commander Oldendorf won again, all with net 81s.

MANOR.

Harry Pitt proved his 69 of last week was no fluke by duplicating the even part score yesterday at Manor, with an out nine of 33 and back nine of 36.

Pitt, paired with Max Taylor to win over Ralph Gibson and W. G. McCreery. The "Manor Moose" went over part on only one hole, the fourteenth, and birdied the fifth. He had 16 pars.

GEORGETOWN PREP.

Georgetown Prep linksmen took the undisputed lead in the Metropolitan Scholastic League yesterday with a 9-to-0 victory over Anacostia on the Prep links.

The Little Hoyas were extended only in one match, when Titus and McDonnell were taken to the last green by Coleman and Hayes, of the Techites, in the best ball of the second foursome. The winners won the other matches by 3 and 2 margins or better.

Dettweiler (G) defeated Blank, 3 and 2; Brayer (G) defeated Burgess, 8 and 7; best ball, Georgetown Prep, 4 and 3.

McDonnell (G) defeated Coleman, 3 and 2; Titus (G) defeated Hayes, 6 and 4; best ball, Georgetown Prep, 3 and 2.

Messeh (G) defeated Boswell, 7 and 6; Higgins (G) defeated Ater, 9 and 7; best ball, Georgetown Prep, 6 and 5.

BELLE HAVEN.

A field of at least 50 professionals and amateurs are expected to compete in the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. pro-amateur at Belle Haven today. Among the local pros competing are Tommy Ryan with three members of the host club, Wiffy Cox, Kenwood, with Levi Yoder and Russ Hollebaugh; Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam, with W. R. Stone, Al Jamison, Indian Spring, with Harry Peacock, Arthur Urban and Jimmy Brownell; Al Treder, Manor, with Harry Pitt, Ray Fleming and Jack McBride, and Mel Shorey, East Potomac, with Volney Burnett.

CHEVY CHASE.

Reeve Lewis, who recently carved out a 68 at Chevy Chase, turned in a creditable round of 73 yesterday despite the gale-like winds while playing with Ralph Quinter, jr., W. W. Rapley and George Gailbraith.

CAPITOL.

Ken Spencer and Frank White paired to win a hotly contested match at Capitol yesterday, defeating Bill Pendegast and Roy Aten by a 2 and 1 margin. White had an individual 73 and Spencer came through on four holes for a best-ball of 69.

CONGRESSIONAL.

The initial club breakfast foursomes at Congressional were set back a week by the weatherman yesterday, as the starting hour of 8 a. m. was uninviting for a golf tournament. They have been rescheduled for next Sunday morning.

Steel Industry Returns 6% on Total Capital

Net Profit of 22 Leading Producers Rose 54.7% Last Year.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 10.—Twenty-two leading steel producers, representing 90 per cent of total ingot capacity, in 1937 earned $242,058,038 after taxes and other charges, but before funded debt interest and dividends, the magazine Steel's twelfth annual financial survey will say tomorrow.

Comparable earnings for the same interests in 1936 were $167,954,226. Last year's earnings were the highest since 1929 when 21 leading companies earned $399,751,660. In 1932, 26 producers reported $116,887,789 loss before interest and dividends.

After deducting bond interest, the 22 companies in 1937 had net earnings amounting to $212,440,521, compared with $137,263,083 in 1936. This represented an increase of 54.7 per cent for 1937.

Allowing for $50,655,226 for preferred dividend requirements, their 1937 net was $161,785,295, compared with $87,266,814 in 1936.

Record 9.88 Per Cent.

Total earnings of $242,058,038 last year represented a 6.1 per cent return on $3,966,690,871 capitalization. This compares with 4.4 per cent for the same interests in 1936. Substantially the same producers reported 2.09 per cent in 1935, 0.36 per cent in 1934, a deficit of 0.9 per cent in 1933 and a loss of 2.85 per cent in 1932. Highest earnings in recent years were 9.88 per cent on capitalization in 1929.

Size of company apparently had little effect on earnings per ton of capacity, although leading interests made a relatively better showing in 1937 than in 1936. United States Steel Corporation reported $3.88, or 4 cents above the average for the 22 companies, and rated tenth in the list. Bethlehem Steel Corporation earned $4.14 per ton of capacity, and rated ninth. In 1936, Bethlehem and U. S. Steel rated fifteenth and sixteenth, respectively.

Earnings per common share for the 22 companies averaged $4.92 in 1937, compared with $2.92 in 1936, and 2 cents in 1935. National Steel was high with $8.31, followed by Inland with $8.05, U. S. Steel with $8.01 and Bethlehem with $7.64.

Assets of the 22 producers totaled $4,389,215,605 in 1937, against $4,210,354,654 in 1936. Current assets were $1,201,373,169, compared with $1,147,282,838. Current liabilities were $283,262,467 against $267,926,727.

Hudson Bay Co. Is 269 Years Old

London, April 10 (AP).—The 269th annual report of the Hudson's Bay Co., made public today, announced a 4 per cent dividend on ordinary shares, first since July 1930. Sharp decline in raw fur prices resulted in net trading profit, for 12 months ended January 31, of $916,000, compared to the previous year's $1,133,000.

The report recites expansion of the company's fur trading to South-West Africa, Scandinavia, Afganistan, India and South America; and mentions with pride the commercial use of the northwest passage, objective of the company's early expeditions. The annual meeting is still called the annual court, shareholders are termed proprietors, and the governor and committee correspond to the usual chairman and board of directors.

Business, Labor, Investors In Bitter War, Says Babson

Produce More Instead of Fighting Over What Now Exists, He Advises; Trying to Revive Old Industries a Mistake, He Says.

By Roger W. Babson.

Savannah, Ga., April 10.—Hatred between groups in this country is greater now than at any time since the Civil War. Scarcely a day passes that some group is not at another's throat. With 10,000,000 unemployed it's time for Washington, business, labor, utilities and investors to pull together. Consequently, I hope this article will be read by President Roosevelt, John L. Lewis, David Lillienthal, of the TVA, and Wendell L. Willkie, of Commonwealth & Southern. At any rate, I am sending all these men marked copies.

What Not to Do.

(1) Fighting over what now exists instead of trying to produce more is our first big mistake. Only as more is produced is there more to divide. If we distributed the entire national production equally among all the people, omitting small children, it would amount to only about what $500 can buy. Here is a simple problem for every reader. Total the annual wages of the bread-winners in your home. Then take the number of people in your family, less babies, and multiply this number by $500. The difference between these two figures will show how much your family would gain or lose each year if the national income was equally distributed. You can see that we never get far by fighting over what already exists.

(2) Trying to revive old industries is our second big mistake. I would like to see the railroads helped, the farmers helped, the coal miners helped, and other groups helped. "Helping" these groups by bolstering up wages and prices, however, will never put any more people back to work. The trouble with our Government financing today is that we are spending two dollars to save one dollar! Furthermore, we will never get out of debt by getting into more debt. Industries, like people, have a definite length of life. A study of history shows that prosperity has come about through the development of new industries—never through trying to revive old, existing industries.

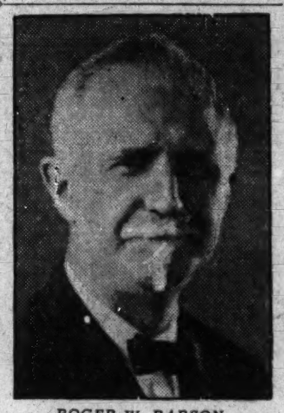
A Needed New Industry.

During the past three months, I have devoted a large amount of time to an impartial study of the various new industries on the horizon. I feel that air-conditioning offers the greatest opportunity. If the country would declare a moratorium on political back-biting and spend the same energy on whipping up enthusiasm over air-conditioning, 5,000,000 people could be returned to jobs. Most of the proposed new industries would put out of work some people who are now engaged in existing occupations. This is not true of the air-conditioning industry. It could directly or indirectly give millions of people jobs and go a long way toward restoring employment to normal conditions.

I will admit that air-conditioning would throw some doctors, and perhaps druggists, out of jobs. I have in mind the fact that air-conditioning greatly improves the health and efficiency of workers in factories, stores and homes. Remember that air-conditioning is much more than merely cooling your rooms. It means drying the air in summer, and moistening it in winter. There are only three things in life, viz: How we think, how we feel, and how we love. Certainly, air-conditioning can become a great factor in the first two of these and perhaps an influence in the third!

What About the Power Row?

We see much in the papers today about the row in Congress over the TVA. I feel that the Administration has been unfair to the public utilities. They do not deserve the persecution which they have had. On the other hand, if all parties would stop scrapping and unitedly get behind air-conditioning, the whole problem would solve itself. Due to the demands for power from air-conditioning, there will be a shortage of generating capacity even after the new big Government dams are in full operation. Some day, when air-conditioning is universally used, the utilities will thank President Roosevelt for his foresight in providing this additional electric power.



ROGER W. BABSON.

I expect to spend next week in Washington. While there, I shall visit the White House offices, the Senate and the House of Representatives; also the offices of some of your Congressmen. I expect to find all these offices air-conditioned. Yet less than one-tenth of one per cent of the office buildings, stores and factories in this country are air-conditioned. Why should these political leaders deny the people something which they themselves consider indispensable? They should pass along this great improvement to others.

What About Relief?

The Roosevelt Administration has gone into debt $20,000,000,000 in trying to beat depression. I do not object so much to the money involved. The great harm has been the undermining of character. I often wonder whether, if our Great Western country were unsettled today, our young men and women would have the guts to go out and build the railroads, hew the forests, start the farms, and do the other things which our grandparents did 75 years ago.

But let us not cry over spilt milk. Let us blame no one, not even the President, for anything that has been done up to date. From now on, however, let us devote our energies to developing new industries. If possible, let us select industries like air-conditioning which will not compete with existing industries. In this way, relief can steadily be cut down, self-respect will be restored and the country can enter a real period of prosperity and growth.

N. Y. Bank Stocks Advance in Week

New York, April 10.—Substantial gains were recorded by New York City bank stocks at the close of the past week, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster. The aggregate market value of 16 leading issues on April 8 was $1,268,177,000, compared with $1,187,155,000 at the close of the previous week, an increase of $81,021,000, or 6.82 per cent. The current average yield of the 16 issues of 5.20 per cent compares with a yield of 5.56 per cent on April 1.

Insurance stocks in the New York City market also registered a substantial improvement at the close of the past week. The aggregate market value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues on April 8 amounted to $476,055,000, compared with $452,896,000 at the close of the previous week, an increase of $23,159,000, or 5.11 per cent.

Inspiration Profit.

Inspiration Consolidated Copper Co. reported today net income for 1937 of $1,899,661 before deduction for depletion, equal to $1.61 a share of capital stock, compared with 1936 income of $353,722, or 30 cents a share. Mines are located in Arizona.

1,037 Closed Banks Now Liquidated

Marshall R. Diggs, Acting Comptroller of the Currency, announced yesterday the completion of the liquidation of 28 receiverships during March. This makes a total of 1,037 receiverships finally closed or restored to solvency since the banking holiday of March, 1933.

Total disbursements, including offsets allowed, to depositors and other creditors of these 1,037 receiverships, exclusive of the 42 restored to solvency, aggregated $392,239,494, or an average return of 80.1 per cent of total liabilities, while unsecured creditors received dividends amounting to an average of 66.38 per cent of their claims.

Dividends distributed to creditors of all active receiverships during the month of March, 1938, amounted to $3,230,468. Total dividends paid and distributions to depositors of all receiverships from March 16, 1933, to March 31, 1938, amounted to $901,040,131.

Quicksilver Purchases Mystery to Miners

San Francisco, April 10 (AP).—Purchase of more than $50,000 worth of quicksilver here in the last ten days—in sharp contrast with the previous dull market—mystified California mine operators today. The orders were placed through local banks instead of customary channels. The banks decline to disclose identity of the buyers.

Quicksilver interests theorized that Great Britain or France were making the purchases for munitions manufacture. Spain, now largely dominated by the insurgents, and Italy are the largest quicksilver producers outside of California.

Credit Status Of Maryland Is Rated High

But Funding Practices Are Criticized by Lazard Freres & Co.

New York, April 10.—An investment analysis of the State of Maryland, made public today by Lazard Freres & Co., takes a generally favorable view of the State's credit position but criticizes certain of the State's financial practices.

While pointing out that the cash position of Maryland has improved during recent years, the study asserts that this has been accomplished largely through the funding of current expenditures, and that if such funding is to be avoided in the future, the State must adopt "more conservative and more realistic budgetary policies."

Offsetting this unfavorable factor, the analysis points to four favorable elements which strengthen the investment position of obligations of the State. Among these, the short term of the Maryland debt and the consequent rapid retirement schedule are considered by Lazard Freres & Co. of major importance.

Nearly one-half of the present indebtedness of Maryland matures within the next five years, according to the analysis, while the longest maturity of bonds of the State now outstanding is 15 years, the limit established by the Maryland constitution.

The use of serial bonds, obviating the necessity of sinking funds; the existence of important untapped sources of revenue, and the diversified economic activity of Maryland, embracing manufacturing and shipping activities and well developed agricultural, mining and fishing resources are cited as further reasons why the investment firm considers "the State's long-term financial outlook to be favorable, and the general obligation bonds of Maryland to be entitled to high credit rating."

Columbus, Ohio, April 10 (AP).—Pure Oil Co. stockholders authorized today at the annual meeting two additional directors for the company's board. Sewell L. Avery, of Chicago, Montgomery Ward and company chairman, who joined the Pure Oil board in January, will fill one of the new directorships. Norton H. Weber, of Chicago, Pure Oil vice president, was elected to the other.

Henry M. Dawes, president of the company, told stockholders "it is quite possible the petroleum industry generally will not have as severe a curtailment of operations and profits" this year as most industries.

Drought Damage Cuts Argentine Corn Crop

Buenos Aires, April 10 (U.P.).—The agriculture ministry's first report on the 1937-38 Argentine corn crop tonight forecast production at 4,500,000 metric tons, equivalent to 177,155,357 bushels of 56 pounds. The report said 6,199,100 hectares (15,317,976 acres) were planted, of which only 3,047,100 hectares (7,529,284 acres), it is estimated, will be harvested.

Because of the drought it was estimated that about half the area planted would be a total loss. The production estimate was 50.8 per cent lower than 1936-37 and 49 per cent below the average production for the past five years.

Spiegel, Inc., Omits Common Dividend

Chicago, April 10 (AP).—Spiegel, Inc., mail order organization, today deferred action on the current common stock dividend, but voted the regular quarterly payment of $1.12½ on the $4.50 cumulative preferred stock, payable June 15 to stockholders of record June 1. The common stock has been on a $1 annual basis.

A statement disclosed the company did not operate at a profit in the first quarter. The management announced pay cuts of 10 to 20 per cent had been made on a graduating scale on annual salaries of $2,500 and over, but announced an employe bonus plan for 1938.

Week's Cotton Exports Lower Than Year Ago

New York, April 10.—American cotton was forwarded to mills of the world in smaller colume this week than in the corresponding week last year, according to the weekly report of the New York Cotton Exchange. Forwardings totaled 208,000 bales this week against 264,000 last year.

Total forwardings during the season to date are 8,636,000 bales against 10,259,000 in the corresponding period of last season.

Official Notices

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, April 11, 1938. A public hearing having been held by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia in the matter of closing Lincoln road northeast and providing for certain street dedications in connection therewith, in the northeast section, and the said Commissioners being satisfied as to the equity, justice and advisability of said closing, and that the same is in the public interests and not detrimental to the interests of abutting property owners, notice is hereby given that the said Commissioners have prepared the following order: "Ordered: That pursuant to the provisions of Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, Lincoln road between Franklin street and Michigan avenue northeast, as shown on plat filed in the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, numbered as Map No. 2075, is hereby ordered closed, same to take effect on and after May 10, 1938, the title to the land comprised within the lines of said road so closed to revert to the abutting property owners, as shown on said map; and in connection therewith a dedication is provided on said plat for the extension and widening of Franklin street and for the widening of Fourth street and Harewood road south of and adjacent to Michigan avenue northeast." Any and all parties interested must file objections to said closing of Lincoln road in writing before the effective date of above order; otherwise said order shall become effective on May 10, 1938, as aforesaid, and said road between the limits referred to shall on and after said date become closed in accordance with the provisions of said act. IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. George Washington Memorial Association et al., petitioners, vs. Frances Pickett et al., respondents. Equity No. 56280. Order of publication. The object of this suit is to dissolve the George Washington Memorial Association, a nonstock corporation, organized and existing under the laws of the District of Columbia, and to authorize and direct the respondent, Corcoran Thom, trustee of the "permanent fund" of said corporation; to transfer, assign and set over to the respondent, the George Washington University, a corporation organized and existing under acts of the Congress of the United States, the full balance of the funds of the said George Washington Memorial Association, after payment of the debts of said George Washington Memorial Association, if any, and such allowance for costs, expenses and counsel fees as the court may authorize and direct, said funds so transferred, assigned and set over to the George Washington University to be applied by said the George Washington University for the uses and purposes set forth in the petition filed herein. On motion of petitioners, it is this 1st day of April, 1938, ordered that all persons interested in said George Washington Memorial Association, including any creditors thereof, cause their appearance to be entered herein, and show cause, if any they have, on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, why said George Washington Memorial Association should not be dissolved and the balance of the funds of said last-named corporation should not be transferred, assigned and set over to the respondent, the George Washington University, as prayed in the petition filed herein; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided, a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter, and The Washington Post newspaper, before said day. PEYTON GORDON, Justice. Attest, (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By SOPHIE LYMAN, Assistant Clerk.

Bob Burns Says—

I was jest readin' where this country leads all others in the blackmailin' record. In many cases the victim is given a chance to buy some letters that they wrote way back in the days before they thought they would ever amount to very much. This form of blackmailin' would die a purty quick death if every victim would handle it like Grandpa Snazzy did.

In his younger days he fell in love with a city girl and he wrote her many beautiful letters. Years later, when he fell in love with a girl down home and announced his engagement, he gotta letter from the city girl that says: "How much would you be willin' to pay for those old love letters you wrote me?"

Grandpa wrote her and says, "You can keep those letters, I don't need 'em . . . I have carbon copies."

Presents These Nationally Famous Names

And Now..

The New 3-Button Single-Breasted Model in the Suit That Fits and Flatters all 8 builds of Men. It's the British Lounge V-8

WORSTED-TEX SUIT

$40

If you've never worn this exclusive clothing you're missing the smart appearance and fine comfort that these nationally famous suits can give you. The customized workmanship in this distinctive model makes you look inches taller and portrays a more athletic build. Both single and double breasted models in new herringbones and stripes. Once you wear a British Lounge V-8 Suit WE KNOW you'll wear them thereafter. It's the most flattering suit a man can wear.

Men's Shops—Second Floor—The Hecht Co.

Your Shirt

should be WHITE for Spring and Summer by nationally famous . .

Manhattan

With the advent of warmer weather you'll need more white shirts in your wardrobe. It's the most practical of them all. A neutral shade . . . for any suit . . . for any tie . . . for any build of man. Tailoring by Manhattan's expert stylists gives you a shirt with perfect fitting collars and lasting comfort.

Others at $2.50 and $3.50

Men's Shops—Main Floor—The Hecht Co.

"Crusher-Felt"
Stetson "Playboy"

A fur felt that weighs only 2 ounces, yet is so well made it will withstand an unusual amount of wear. A smart Spring style with a tapering crown and sporty narrow band.

Your Shoes

should be British Brogues in smart Norwegian Grain By Nationally Famous . . .

FRENCH, SHRINER & URNER . . . 10.85

The British Brogue Last in the Norwegian Grain on the man above is the accepted style for the British Lounge suit. A wing tip with a neat medallion toe. The Norwegian Grain is a supple leather that gives you lasting comfort and durable service. French, Shriner & Urner shoes, made by master-craftsmen, do not "run over" or "stretch out." They keep their trim, style lines after months of punishing wear.

Men's Shops—Main Floor—The Hecht Co.

Your Neckwear

should be the distinctively patterned, wrinkle-resisting

TROJANS

A necktie to be of service, should "hang out" its wrinkles overnight. The Trojan makers use only the finest woolens for the linings. Crease the all-wool lining in a Trojan . . . then watch it spring quickly back into its original shape.

Other Trojan Neckwear, $1.50 to $2.50
